Tydings Lists $37,024 Gifts In Campaign Fund Report

Both Senator and Lewis Accuse Each Other of Unfairness.

Challenger Cites WPA Aide's Claim

Incumbent Tells Senate of Five 'Notorious' Instances.

The Maryland Race.

Representative Lewis called the Maryland senatorial campaign a clear-cut test of the New Deal; Senator Tydings made a half-dozen campaign talks in Baltimore.—Page 4.

Counter-Charges.

Senator Millard E. Tydings and Representative David J. Lewis filed counter charges yesterday of campaign unfairness with the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee, as a committee show-down on the Maryland contest for the Democratic senatorial nomination was slated for tomorrow.

Listing $37,024 contributed and $35,957 spent in his own campaign, Tydings alleged five "notorious" instances in which he said influence had been brought to bear on Federal employes in behalf of Lewis, or statements had been made to that end.

Lewis sent the committee an affidavit by Joseph Hardy, former Baltimore WPA worker who claimed he could not get another relief assignment because he would not promise to vote for Tydings. Lewis charged "there have been other reports of a similar nature" and asked the committee to "investigate the circumstances."

Reply to Tydings.

Chairman Sheppard said he would lay both the Tydings and Lewis complaints before a meeting of his committee tomorrow. At the same meeting, investigators sent into Maryland will report their findings to date. Sheppard said the committee will decide at that time whether to make the findings public. Sheppard, Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, and Senator White (Republican), of Maine, will be present at the meeting.

Two of the charges filed by Tydings met quick responses from those accused—Hampton Magruder, Baltimore internal revenue collector, and Mrs. Maude R. Toulson, postmistress at Salisbury, Md.

"It is notorious that the collector of internal revenue of Maryland," Tydings wrote the committee, "called in the non-civil service employes, during office hours, and told them that he was for Lewis, my opponent, and reading a statement, indicated by that statement that their tenure of office in the future would be influenced by who was nominated. This can be verified by all of the non-civil service employes of the Maryland internal revenue, which number over a hundred."

"Absolutely a falsehood."

Tydings said it is also "notorious in many places on the Eastern Shore that the postmasters have been told by the postmistress of Salisbury, and by others, to get out and work for Lewis."

"It is notorious and well known all over the Eastern Shore that the postmistress of Salisbury, during office hours, rides to neighboring counties with Congressman Lewis—one of these times was in my actual presence, when I saw them both together—takes advertisements for

McCarran Gets Early Nevada Primary Lead

Democratic Senate Race Pales 2 Hot Contests for Governor.

BULLETIN.

Reno, Nev., Sept. 6 (AP).—Returns from 15 complete and incomplete precincts out of 262 in the Nevada Democratic Senatorial primary today gave:

Senator Pat McCarran, 242.
Albert Hilliard, 40.
Dr. John Worden, 6.

By the Associated Press.

Reno, Nev., Sept. 6.—Efforts of two avowed New Deal supporters to wrest the Democratic senatorial nomination from Senator McCarran overshadowed other contests today in Nevada's primary election and drew a heavy turnout of voters.

Albert Hilliard, Reno attorney, and Dr. John E. Worden, State board of health secretary, contested with McCarran, who opposed the Supreme Court and reorganization bills but campaigned for President Roosevelt's re-election in 1936.

Former Senator Tasker L. Oddie is unopposed for the Republican nomination.

The Democratic and Republican races for Governor were hotly contested. E. P. Carville, generally recognized as a McCarran ally; Harley A. Harmon, chairman of the Public Service Commission; and former Representative Charles L. Richards sought the Democratic nomination.

Republican candidates were Samuel Durkee, a former State highway engineer, and John A. Fulton, until recently director of the University of Nevada Mining School.

The Republican vote was expected to be light since Fulton and Durkee were their party's only Statewide contestants.

A heavy Democratic turnout, however, was expected.

The State has 35,236 registered Democrats, 16,907 Republicans, and about 2,500 voters of miscellaneous affiliations.

Cigarette Girl Held as Spain's Ex-Heir Dies

Count of Covadonga Bleeds to Death After Crash Near Miami.

By the Associated Press.

Miami, Fla., Sept. 6.—The Count of Covadonga, once heir to the crown of Spain, died today of hemophilia, hereditary blood disease that causes profuse bleeding, after an automobile accident. His companion, Miss Mildred Gaydon, night club entertainer, was charged with manslaughter.

The girl was released on her own recognizance. Peace Justice Thomas S. Ferguson issued the warrant on an affidavit signed by W. F. Shields, a deputy constable. Miss Gaydon, 23, brown-haired and gray-eyed, wept as she was being booked but later regained her composure. An inquest was set for Friday.

The girl said the steering gear of her old sedan failed as she swerved to avoid a truck and she and the count were trapped inside for 15 minutes after striking a pole on the left side of the road. She suffered bruises in the crash, which occurred on Biscayne boulevard north of the city limits.

Companion Cigarette Girl.

Miss Gaydon was a cigarette girl at the Pirate's Den, a Bohemian resort operated by Don Dickerman, formerly of New York, and was billed in the advertising as "Merry Mildred."

The one-time Prince of Asturias, son of former Queen Victoria Eugenia, was cut about the head and face, his leg broken and his skull possibly fractured. But he might have recovered except for the disease. It is handed down by the women of his mother's Battenberg line. They are free of it themselves.

Hemophilia prevents coagulation of the blood and lets the smallest wounds bleed profusely. Throughout his 31 years, the cripple count fought his handicap, many times at the door of death.

Blood Flowed Nine Hours.

This time physicians could not stop the flow of blood until about nine hours after the accident. By that time the count was too weak to survive. He died in an oxygen tent.

His secretary, Jack Fleming, cabled the word to Rome to the father, former King Alfonso XIII, and to his estranged Queen in England.

Davey Dares U. S. to Halt Aid to Aged

111,500 Ohioans Facing Loss of Pensions at Hearing Here.

Governor's Letters on Votes Cited; 'Tyranny,' Is His Retort.

By William V. Nessly.

More than 111,500 aged and dependent Ohioans last night faced loss of Federal contributions to their old-age assistance payments, while Gov. Martin L. Davey of Ohio "dared" the Social Security Board to cut off Government funds.

The situation developed after the board had heard a long series of revelations, by its investigators, of instances of alleged "maladministration" of the payment system in the Buckeye State.

Then Gov. Davey, through a member of his secretariat, made public here a letter to the board accusing it of "dirty politics" and declaring:

"Frankly I do not believe you dare deprive these aged citizens of one-half of their scant living to support your political maneuver. It would be an act of cruel tyranny which not even a political faker could justify."

Officials Boycott Hearing.

With State officials, on Davey's order, refusing to attend the board's hearing, called as a "show cause" step preparatory to stoppage of the Federal funds pending correction of alleged abuses, board members listened intently yesterday as their investigators reported that:

Some $2,500,000 has been paid out improperly, without due authority, by the Ohio Division of Aid to the Aged.

Pension recipients were threatened with loss of their funds unless they voted for Gov. Davey when he was seeking renomination and re-election.

State civil service laws have been violated in hiring of incompetent personnel. Truck drivers, meat cutters, oil workers and an embalmer have been employed, presumably for political reasons, while civil service lists of qualified applicants for positions were ignored.

Pay Rolls Loaded.

Detectives have been employed to get evidence with which to force civil service employes to resign, while pay rools have been loaded with "special investigators," persons actually working in the Governor's office and not in the division, and others for whose employment there was no authorization.

Gov. Davey wrote to recipients of old-age assistance, asking each

U. S.-Graded Goods Asked In Trust War

Sumners Proposes Federal Valuation of All Commodities.

Plan Intended to Place Monopolies on a Par With Small Firms.

By Robert C. Albright.

Government certification or labeling of commodities to enable independents to compete on a more equal footing with strong business concentrations has been proposed to the President's joint monopoly investigating committee.

The plan was attributed to Representative Hatton W. Sumners (Democrat), of Texas, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee and a member of the monopoly investigating group.

The Texan declined comment, but it was learned that he made a similar proposal covering standardization of agricultural products 20 years ago, on which House hearings were held, but no action taken. Subsequently he proposed extension of the principle to industrial commodities.

The Joint Committee has only just launched the intensive phase of its monopoly study, leading off with investigations of patents and insurance company investments. Hearings may not get under way until late fall, and to date the studies have been directed at monopoly abuses rather than remedies.

Several Remedies Proposed.

Indications are that only a preliminary report will be made to the next Congress, with perhaps some recommended procedural changes in the anti-trust laws, without an immediate comprehensive attack on the whole monopoly problem. Nevertheless, several proposed remedies are said to have figured in some committee discussions, among them the Summers standardization proposal, and the Borah-O'Mahoney Federal licensing bill, designed to bring corporations under close Government regulations through Federal incorporation.

Sumners has been plugging away for his standardization plan since 1919. As late as 1932 he tried unsuccessfully to get through the House a resolution for an investigation "to determine the changes, if any, in the anti-trust law and policy may be required." He sponsored the present monopoly investigation resolution in the House.

Briefly, the proposal attributed to him calls for Government inspection and certification of commodities moving in interstate commerce, which could then be sold under a Government grading making their

Tax Bureau Holds Raskob, duPont Owe U. S. 2 Million

By the Associated Press.

The Internal Revenue Bureau estimated yesterday that Pierre S. duPont and John J. Raskob owed the Government about $2,100,000 as a result of a Board of Tax Appeals decision invalidating 1929 securities sales by the two financiers to each other.

The bureau filed a computation with the board in accordance with what its lawyers believed to be the monetary results of the board's legal findings, declaring that Raskob owed $888,285 plus interest and Dupont $580,389 plus interest.

Bureau officials said the interest would bring the total owed by the two men to about $2,100,000.

Henlein Goes to Hitler With New Czech Offer; Army Rules Marseilles

Mediterranean Seaport Is Put Under Martial Law by France.

Seeks to Guard Lines to Africa

Order Is Result of Long Dock Strike; Navy Cancels Leaves.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Sept. 6.—The French government tonight ordered the army to take over the great Mediterranean port of Marseille, control point for communications with its North African reservoir of troops and raw materials for war.

The decree providing for the move has been drafted almost since the beginning of the Marseille dock-workers' "week-end" strike movement early in July.

It was put into effect, however, only as numbers of reserves were called to the colors to strengthen the garrisons of fortifications on the German border.

While the move ostensibly was made to assure ordinary operation of the port, it was considered a strategic necessity to make sure of uninterrupted communication with North Africa should war come as a result of the crisis over Czechoslovakia.

Governors on Duty.

The decree itself is based on the law for "general organization of the nation in time of war," published July 11.

It followed closely upon cancellation of vacations for French governors of North African possessions.

Gen. Nogues, high commissioner for Morocco, and Armand Guillon, governor general of Tunisia, at an interview with Foreign Minister Bonnet, received instructions to return to their posts. Gen. Nogues was reported going first to Tunis to make a survey of the North African military situation.

Some French newspapers in recent days have published statements that Premier Mussolini of Italy would concentrate his attack on Tunisia if a general war should come.

The government's action putting Marseille under military rule followed weeks of fruitless efforts by Premier Daladier to get dockworkers to load and unload ships on Sunday—which they refused to do because of their 40-hour week.

May Mobilize Dockworkers.

It was not made known immediately whether the dockworkers would be mobilized and required to work under military order, but the decree gives the premier that power.

The action was seen as closely connected with the Czechoslovak crisis.

Smooth operation of French communications with its North African reservoir of troops and raw materials is vital to the national defense.

[There are 200,000 colonial troops which could be rushed across the Mediterraneaen to bolster the French continental army of between 430,00 and 500,000 men, the United Press said.

[The navy, supplementing military measures on the Maginot line is taking secret precautionary measures and, at the Toulon naval base, all officers on leave have been recalled—Editor's note.]

Hitler Warns GermanyCan't Be Blockaded

Czech Plan for 3 Blocs Is Held Unacceptable to Hitler.

Nuremberg, Germany, Sept. 6.—Chancellor Adolf Hitler, in his proclamation inaugurating the tenth Nazi Party congress here today, served notice on Great Britain and the United States, the great western sea powers, without mentioning them by name, that Germany now is too strong to be strangled by a blockade, as she was in the World War.

In view of the measures toward economic self-sufficiency which the Reich has taken under the four-year plan and its corollaries, Hitler said, "the idea of the blockade of Germany even now can be buried as an entirely ineffective weapon."

Both in his proclamation and in a speech tonight on "kultur," the new supreme war lord avoided any direct reference to the Czech-German dispute over the Sudeten territory.

Madrid, Sept. 6 (AP).—A stoker aboard the 1,989-ton British freighter Marvia was killed today when the vessel was hit by three bombs and set afire during an insurgent air raid on the Spanish government port of Alicante. ## Sudeten Chief Dashes to Nazi Party Congress at Nuremberg.

Unofficial 'Truce' Reigns in Dispute

Fuehrer to Study 'Final' Prague Concessions Before Address.

By the Associated Press.

Prague, Sept. 6.—The Sudeten Germans' "Little Fuehrer," Konrad Henlein quietly set out on another trip to Germany today less than 24 hours after the Czechoslavak government had formulated its "last and ultimate" offer to his autonomy demanding followers.

Without comment Henlein heard sweeping concessions to the Sudeten German minority contained in the government's new offer. Then he put on his trench coat and started a long automobile drive for Nuremberg, Germany, to participate in the Nazi Party Congress.

Sudeten German circles yesterday had made it clear they expected Henlein to report to Reichfuehrer Hitler of Germany again before Hitler discusses foreign affairs—and probably the world-troubling Czechoslovak minority crisis—at Nuremberg.

French, British Notified.

In two conferences with Henlein at Berchtesgaden, Bavaria, last week, Hitler was understood to have advised the Sudeten leader to stand pat on the eight-point autonomy platform advanced by Henlein April 24.

The government's new concessions to the Sudeten Germans—described as granting almost all their demands—agreed upon a cabinet meeting last night, had been transmitted to the British and French legations here.

Both Britain and France were understood to have urged the government to make concessions to the clamorous Sudeten minority in the interests of world peace. Whether the concessions were great enough to satisfy Henlein and Hitler remained unanswered.

An unproclaimed armistice settled over the Sudeten German dispute as both sides studied the government's far-reaching concessions. Both sides for the moment were deeply interested in the Nuremberg congress, however, anxious to know whether Hitler in the next few days would say something about the fate of Czechoslovakia.

The little sparring which did occur on a quiet day revolved about the government's refusal to grant recognition to the German populace as a "legal entity," which the Sudeten Party had demanded.

Benes, Runciman Confer.

The government desired a more specific definition of the term. The government wanted to be sure that the Sudetens as an independent "legal entity" did not propose to adopt independent customs or independent economic and military policies.

President Benes conferred separately with Viscount Runciman, head of the unofficial British mediation mission, and Henlein's lieutenant, Ernst Kundt.

One established report was that the government had agreed to negotiate with the Sudeten Germans after the Nuremberg congress on the basis of the Sudeten eight-point autonomy program.

The Sudeten Party announced today that, like the Nazis of Germany, it would have a "party day" similar to the Nuremberg congress. It is to be held October 16 and 17 at Aussio, near the German border south of Dresden, Germany.

Post-Junior Board Traffic Institute Opens Enrollment for Safety Education Program

Films, Talks, Broadcasts Will Be Presented Every Week.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Enrollment opened yesterday for coming sessions of The Washington Post-Junior Board of Commerce traffic safety institute, scheduled to begin the first week in October.

Designed to focus public attention on problems of accident prevention, the institute will undertake to promote safe driving habits by offering Washington motorists a unique ten-weeks program of safety education.

To stimulate interest in current efforts to combat traffic troubles, an oral "safety quiz," conducted by recognized traffic control experts, will feature each session—with fitting awards to those who take top honors.

Cashier of Gang Places Hines On Pay Roll of Dutch Schultz

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Sept. 6.—"Big Harry" Schoenhaus, paymaster of the Dutch Schultz gang, testified today in supreme court that he personally paid James J. Hines, veteran Tammany leader, $500 or more on seven or eight occasions.

The gang, he said, in corroboration of other witnesses, put up $30,000 in 1933 to elect Hines' candidate, William C. Dodge, district attorney.

The trial of Hines, on charges of protecting Schultz's Harlem policy racket against police and courts, was halted for 10 minutes when court opened to pay tribute to the late Cardinal Hayes. First Lloyd Paul Stryker, chief counsel for the defense, then Thomas E. Dewey, district attorney, and finally Supreme Court Justice Ferdinand Pecora, who is hearing the case, delivered brief eulogies of the churchman, recalling his charity, his personal kindliness, his piety, his influence for good in the community, and his patriotism.

Then Stryker resumed the cross-examination of Mrs. Rose Wendroff, sister of J. Richard "Dixie" Davis, counsel to the Schultz mob, and drew from her so many "I don't-knows," and "I don't-remembers" as to amaze a fascinated courtroom.

"Big Harry" was the day's star witness, a burly, stolid, thick-maned citizen of 43, who was vague only about his whereabouts about the time Dutch Schultz was murdered, or immediately thereafter, and who told a glib, corroborative tale on payments [illegible]sters' money to Hines. He paid the Tammany leader, he said, at three places—at his home, at the Monongahela Democratic Club, and twice at the

Labor Act Held Violated Six Times by Ford

600 Workers Recommended by Board Examiner to Be Rehired.

By Sidney Olson.

Slowly approaching a final showdown with the Ford Motor Co., the National Labor Relations Board received a report yesterday from its California trial examiner, Thomas H. Kennedy, recommending reinstatement of 129 employes, with back pay, at the Richmond, Calif., Fort plant.

Bringing to 800 the number of Ford workers recommended for reinstatement by board orders or trial examiners' rpeort, the newest finding said flatly the company had violated the National Labor Relations Act for the sixth time.

Ford, who defied Gen. Hugh Johnson's most vigorous efforts to "crack down" on him during the NRA days, is now involved in 11 NLRB cases spread across the country.

Involves C. I. O. Again.

As the only major automobile magnate not bargaining with the Committee for Industrial Organization, Ford is expected to fight the Wagner Act's powers all the way to the Supreme Court. Further noncompliance with the board's orders in the newest case is generally expected.

The Richmond case, Kennedy reported, involves the C. I. O. again, as the United Automobile Workers of America, a C. I. O. affiliate, represents 1,120 of the 1,277 workers in the San Francisco Bay area plant.

Kennedy said that despite this duly held election, the company refused to bargain with the union and on January 3 of this year definitely refused to discuss any labor relation matters with union representatives.

Kennedy said:

"A long continued plan of union discouragement used by the company, in which it is found to have utilized services of one so-called 'John Adams,' a man with many aliases, for the purpose of misleading the employes as to the labor policies of Ford, is reported."

Ridicules Red Tie-up.

His report found "extensive distribution of propaganda by the management to the employes, ridiculing unionism and attempting to identify the complaining union as communistic."

The examiner further reported the Ford company's labor policy to be that as understood by a foreman: "There is no organized union recognized by the Ford Motor Co."

The company's expected failure to comply will result in the usual transference of the case to Washington.

Findings were based on a 15-day public hearing at Richmond, ending July 9 of this year.

The finding reported that of men not recalled to work for resumption of manufacture of the 1938 model Ford, 129 were not recalled because of their active participation in the union, basing this on their greater seniority in most cases to many of the men who were recalled.

338 Anti-Aircraft Guns Ordered for U.S. Coastal Cities

The War Department disclosed yesterday that orders have been placed with civilian firms and arsenals for 338 anti-aircraft guns, to cost more than $10,000,000, in the first major military move here to equip strategic cities with modern defense against airplane attack.

Both the Atlantic and Pocific coastlines will get the guns, but the Army is particularly anxious to improve defenses of Eastern seaboard cities from Boston to Washington. The contracts are expected to equip 32 regiments with the weapons. The guns will be mobile, resting on their own wheeled carriers which in turn will be drawn by trucks. Mechanical arrangements quickly bring the guns to a stationary, firing position.

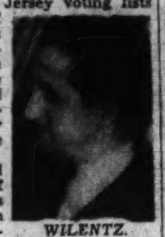
N. J. Women, Anti-New Dealers, Demand Vote Be Denied to WPA Workers.

By the Associated Press.

Perth Amboy, N. J.—A delegation of anti-New Deal women demanded of Attorney General David T. Wilentz that New Jersey voting lists be purged of WPA workers and relief recipients on the ground they are paupers and therefore constitutionally barred from the ballot.



WILENTZ.

Wilentz told the members of the "women's rebellion," an organization opposing election of pro-New Deal Congressmen, that he would study their demand and give an opinion "as soon as possible."

Mrs. Sarah Oliver Hulswit, of Suffern, N. Y., national chairman of the "women's rebellion" and spokesman for the delegation at an hour-long conference, told Wilentz that "any one who is supported by the Government" is a pauper and is barred from voting by article 2, section 1, of the State constitution.

Relief recipients and WPA workers, she said, were "intimidated and coerced" by Government officials in voting and could not "vote freely."

Columbia, S. C.—Senator Smith's majority over Gov. Olin D. Johnston, who had President Roosevelt's indorsement, was placed at 36,082 votes yesterday by the South Carolina Democratic executive committee, in officially declaring the results of last week's primary.

The vote was: Smith, 186,519; Johnston, 150,437. Fifty-two votes were recorded for State Senator Edgar A. Brown, who withdrew from the race and threw his support to Smith two days before the primary, too late for his name to be removed from the ballots.

Following publication of a statement in a newspaper column that betting at the National Press Club was at odds of 8 to 1 in favor of New Deal Representative Lewis as against Senator Tydings in the Maryland primary brought formation of a pool by a score of club members who wanted to get these odds.

The sum of $1,000 was supplied in cash within a few minutes. Two Press Club members took the money to the authors of the column and offered to bet on Tydings at the odds quoted. Their response was to turn down the bet and to say that they knew of no Lewis money available at such odds nor were any lesser odds favoring Mr. Lewis offered by them.

Both President Roosevelt and Postmaster General James A. Farley, it was disclosed yesterday, got a laugh out of a pamphlet which was put into circulation by friends of Representative Lewis satirizing "The Life & Times of Milord Tydings" and picturing as members of "the royal family," Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Davies.

Mr. Davies is father-in-law of blacklisted Senator Tydings, but he is also Mr. Roosevelt's ambassador to Belgium. Friends of Mr. Lewis said a pre-view of the pamphlet was given to the President and Mr. Farley during th eirMaryland trip Monday, and that they found it funny.

Arguments on Rival Investigations of Campaign end Heatedly.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Sept. 6.—The question of the future course of rival investigations of campaign charges against Gov. Earle and 13 others high in Pennsylvania, was put up to the State Supreme Court today in stormy arguments.

On one side, District Attorney Carl B. Shelley, of Dauphin County (Harrisburg), and two associates contended laws speedily passed by a special session of the Democratic-controlled Legislature to give a House committee priority over a grand jury in the inquiry should be held unconstitutional.

The district attorney called the new acts "a bold attempt" of the Legislature "at the instance of the Governor" to "override the judicial branch."

Both inquiries were held up pending the high court's decision on administration appeals from Judge Paul N. Schaeffer's ruling that the anti-grand jury laws were invalid.

Administration lawyers called the case an issue "between the people at large and the judiciary."

"If the people cannot be protected by our Constitution, it's time we got a new constitution in Pennsylvania," argued Abram Salsburg, counsel for the special legislative committee.

He declared the laws were valid and sought an order to permit resumption of the legislative inquiry. The House has a "power of investigation equal to that of all of the district attorneys and all of the grand juries in Pennsylvania combined," Salsburg contended.

Attorney General Guy K. Bard appealed to the court for permission to supersede Shelley in directing the grand jury—if it continues its investigation.

District Attorney Shelley arranged the proposed jury investigation on information supplied chiefly by former Attorney General Charles J. Margiotti, who fired the first charges of blackmail, conspiracy and coercion in his unsuccesful drive for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

Earle, who led the Democratic ticket in winning the nomination for United States Senator, dismissed Margiotti during the campaign.

Utility Facing PWA Struggle Offers to Sell

Tex. Company eSes Threat of Destruction in U. S. Competitive Loans.

The Texas Light & Power Co. yesterday offered to sell a 13-county bloc of its territory to the Colorado River Authority, a PWA-financed tion project, as the long struggle between the Administration and private utilities spread to another sector of the country.

In a lengthy, vigorously-phrased letter, John W. Carpenter, the utility's president, made the offer "in the face of the apparent alternative of threatened destruction of a large segment of the company's markt by means of PWA loans and grants for duplicate electrical systems in cities located 'scatter-shot fashion' throughout the territory."

Carpenter asserted that last March the Texas company had offered to provide a market for all the power the Authority could produce, at a purchase price and under conditions to be set by the Authority. even to allowing the CRA to recover the power in the future for sale to municipalities or co-operatives.

This offer, Carpenter noted, was declined, and continued conferences since have resulted only in insistence by the Authority on surrender of substantial portions of the Texas market by the company, on threat of duplication of facilities with public money as the alternative.

Carpenter called his proposal a "desperate effort" to compose the differences, but added: "We respectfully point out to you that the methods which your representatives have employed to accomplish your desired ends are destructive of the best interests of the people in Texas whom you hope to serve and also of the Authority itself."

He then made the offer of sale, with certain reservations, coupling with it a denunciation of the "unsound and destructive competitive situation" which he charged had been brought about by the CRA in conjunction with the Public Works Administration.

Benson Hails 'Liberal' Plea Of Roosevelt

Minnesota Farmer-Labor Governor Indorses War on 'Conservatism.'

By the Associated Press.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 6.—Gov. Elmer Benson, speaking as a member of Minnesota's Farmer-Labor Party, gave unqualified indorsement today to President Roosevelt's drive to elect "liberal" candidates to Congress.

Conferring with the President at the latter's Hyde Park home, Gov. Benson told Mr. Roosevelt that citizens of the whole Northwest are behind the Administration effort to rid Congress of conservative opponents of the New Deal program.

Mr. Roosevelt, pressing his general campaign for the election of "liberal" against "conservatives," said last week that in some cases the election of a liberal Republican would be preferable to the election of a conservative Democrat.

Says Northwest Pleased.

Demonstrating a similar disregard for party lines, Benson told reporters he had advised Mr. Roosevelt that the Northwest is "very much pleased about his fight for liberalism."

"Including Wisconsin?" a reporter asked.

"Including Wisconsin," Benson answered.

In Wisconsin, the New Deal candidate, Senator Duffy, a Democrat, faces opposition by a nominee of the La Follette Progressive Party. Senator Robert La Follette, who has fought for many Administration measures, has said he will campaign for the Progressive candidate.

Benson left with the Chief Executive a 16-page memorandum detailing the farm situation in Mennesota and suggesting a ten-point program to hike agricultural prices.

Basic Prices Urged.

The program, formulated at a recent conference in Minnesota, had these key provisions:

Basic minimum farm prices guaranteeing farmers an income above the cost of production.

Increased Federal purchases of surplus commodities for distribution among the needy.

Soil conservation.

An ever-normal granary and crop insurance.

A break-up of the "food and implement monopolies."

A "far-reaching" Federal program to eliminate farm tenancy.

Refinancing of farmer debts at scaled-down interest rates.

Co-operatives Favored.

Government aid to flood and drought victims.

Federal support of co-operatives.

Co-operation among "the farmers, labor and other groups."

Referring to the "temper of farmers," Benson's memorandum said that prices now are declining. "Naturally," it added, "criticism of the New Deal increases and the Farmer-Labor Party gets its share of the blame for not 'doing something.' . . .

"The situation will become more acute as Republicans and other reactionary forces make increasingly wild promises."

The memorandum said farmers now "are in debt to their eyes" and added: "Obviously, there will be more delinquencies during the balance of this year and next year if prices continue at a low level."

Benson said he thought agriculture should "serve as the lead horse in pulling the Nation out of the mud," and suggested to reporters that Federal price fixing, export subsidies and Government ownership of some packing plants might be steps toward hiking farm income.

His memorandum expressed no criticism of the existing farm program.

"I think it is accurate to say," the statement said, "that only the New Deal stands between farmers and Hoover farm prices."

In the November election, Benson is opposed by Harold Stassen, a Republican, and Tom Gallagher, a Democrat. The Governor said he told the President that he would win but that he would have a fight.

The Gallup Poll:

C. I. O.'s Indorsement a Liability in Many Instances, Survey Reveals.

By Dr. George Gallup,

Director American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, Sept. 6.—With both the C. I. O. and the American Federation of Labor singling out their favorites for political indorsement in the coming elections, the question inevitably arises:

GALLUP.

How much of an asset—or how much of a liability—is indorsement by these two bodies?

The American Institute of Public Opinion has conducted a Nation-wide study among voters of all classes to find out what the popular reaction is.

The results show today that indorsement by the C. I. O. may actually be a political liability—a "black mark"—in most congressional contests this November.

While only about one voter in ten says he would be inclined to vote for a candidate because of a C. I. O. indorsement, more than five voters in ten say they would be inclined to vote against him.

The remaining voters say it would "make no difference." The actual vote is:

"If the C. I. O. indorses a candidate from this State, would it influence you to vote for or against the candidate?"

Would influence "for" 12 per cent.

Would influence "against" 55 per cent.

Would "make no difference" 33 per cent.

The survey indicates that an indorsement by the American Federation of Labor would not have nearly the negative effect of a C. I. O. indorsement in most cases.

Only 25 per cent say they would be influenced to vote against the candidate thus indorsed. On the other hand, 22 per cent said they would be influenced to vote for him.

Fifty-three per cent, or more than half, say that A. F. of L. indorsement would make no difference in their vote.

One reason whoy the C. I. O. has become a negative political symbol to so many voters is undoubtedly the fact that they associate John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization with use of the sit-down strike.

From the first widespread use of the sit-down in America, early in 1937, surveys of the American Institute of Public Opinion have shown sharp public resentment of it.

Resentment has been particularly strong with middle-class voters, including small town business men and farmers.

Recently, moreover, the spotlight has been thrown on the question of Communist influence in the C. I. O. Before the Dies committee in Washington recently an official of the American Federation of Labor accused a long list of C. I. O. leaders of being Communists. The accusations of President Homer Martin of the C. I. O. auto workers union and stump speeches by politicians in primary campaigns have also charged Communist influence in the C. I. O.

Puerto Rican Raps C.I.O., Lauds A.F.L.

San Juan, P. R., Sept. 6.—Prudencio Revera Martinez, one of the founders of the organized labor movement in Puerto Rico, before a large labor gathering last night, preliminary to a special labor convention to be held on Armistice Day, said the workers' economic and political advancement in Puerto Rico in the last quarter of a century was due to support of the A. F. of L., which also was responsible for liberal labor legislation.

On the other hand, he went on, outside agitators, unacquainted with and uninterested in the island's problems, had caused thousands of farmers to lose their season's profits because of the C. I. O.'s recent dock workers strike.

Dies May Summon Miss Perkins for Story on Bridges

By the United Press.

Chairman Martin Dies (Democrat), Texas, of the House Committee investigating un-American activities, yesterday notified Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins that she may be summoned before his group to explain the Labor Department's failure to deport Harry Bridges, foreign-born West Coast labor leader, as a Communist.

Dies issued a statement saying he had received "hundreds of letters from people throughout the country" supporting his demand that Bridges be deported immediately.

Sea Commission Calls for Bids on Fast Cargo Ships

Invitations for bids on its newly-designed C-3 cargo vessels have been issued by the United States Maritime Commission as part of its American Merchant Marine expansion program, it was announced yesterday.

The commission announced that as many as 12 ships might be constructed.

Noteworthy for their speed of 16 and ½ knots and for the excellence of their crews' quarters, these ships will incorporate the most modern principles of cargo vessel construction, experts said.

Democrats Bar 'Mud-Slinging' In Montgomery

Factions Agree to 'Clean' Primary Campaign Through County.

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post, 9125 Clark Ave., Silver Spring, Md. Telephone SHepherd 4200.

Agreement to restrain from further "mud-slinging" in the Montgomery County Democratic primary campaign was reached yesterday by leaders of the two warring factions at a conference in Rockville.

Another development of the day was a joint statement by James H. Pugh, chairman of the Independent Democratic faction campaign committee, and former Judge Donald A. DeLashmutt, that their indorsement of Senator Tydings was entirely personal and had no connection with the Independent faction, which has not indorsed any candidate in the Senatorial fight.

The announcement followed a stormy session at which candidates of the faction charged the Tydings indorsement by Pugh and DeLashmutt had endangered the possible victory of the faction in the primary.

The mud-slinging agreement was announced by Peter, who said: "We agreed to wage the campaign in clean cut fashion, to eliminate any discussion of personalities, and to confine our fight to discussion of the merits of our candidates and our platforms."

Pugh declared neither side intended to run the campaign in such a manner as to defeat Democratic chances in the general election.

Both sides have announced they will support the candidates selected by the voters in the primaries.

The Independent faction will issue sample ballots with the name of the Senatorial candidates left blank and without exhibiting any choice between David J. Lewis and Millard Tydings. The Democratic organization has issued vari-colored ballots with a variety of choices for Senator and for governor, although supporting Tydings.

Organization workers who had attempted to obtain sample ballots marked for Lewis found a decided shortage of these ballots, they reported to headquarters of the Lewis-for-Senator-Club yesterday, according to Mrs. Raymond Clapper, co-chairman for the suburban area.

Sample ballots marked for Lewis alone and which are headed with the caption: "New Deal Sample Ballot," and which carry the statement that Lewis is: "The People's Choice, the President's Choice and Your Choice,' were issued last night to members of the club and other Lewis workers.

Hubert Redding, former district superintendent of public schools in Maine, will be the new principal of the Takoma Park Academy of the Washington Missionary College, it was announced yesterday.

A native of maine, Redding graduated from the Atlantic Union College in South Lancaster, Mass., and received his M. A. degree at the University of Boston. He was recently head of the department of science at Brookline High School.

Redding takes the place of Floyd Rittenhouse, principal of the academy for four years. Rittenhouse resigned to head the history department at the Southern Junior College in Collegedale, Tenn. He will leave Takoma Park tomorrow to assume his duties in the Southern school.

Registration of pupils in the Takoma Park Academy will be held September 12. The school accommodates 160 pupils.

Permit for the operation of a rest home for nervous patients on the Columbia pike near Fairland was granted by the board of county commissioners of Montgomery County yesterday at their weekly meeting in Rockville.

The public hearing was attended only by Frank B. Proctor, architect, who drew the plans for the proposed 40-bed structure.

Appropriation of $2,707.54 was voted for the county welfare board for the month of September, including $1,301.27 for old-age assistance, $50 for burials, $862.46 for aid to dependent children, $147.15 for aid to needy blind and $346.66 for administrative expense.

The commissioners voted to close all county offices next Monday, Defenders' Day and primary election day.

Democratic workers in the Ninth election district of Takoma Park, Md., will hold a lawn party today at 8 p. m., in honor of Ben G. Wilkinson, jr., candidate for State's attorney in the Democratic primary, at 22 Sherman avenue, the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Osborn.

The affair also is being held for new registrants in the district. Assisting the hosts will be Mrs. Hugh McKinnie, chairman of refreshments; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Griffin and Martin Iverson. Wilkinson, a native of Takoma Park, Md., lives in the Ninth Precinct.

Former Judge Donald A. DeLashmutt, chairman of the Independent Democratic faction of Montgomery County, will make a radio address from Frederick, Md., at noon today in support of the candidacy of William F. Prettyman, of Rockville, for judge of the Circuit Court in the Democratic primary.

Prettyman, president of the Montgomery County Bar Association, is seeking the nomination over Stedman Prescott, backed by the county Democratic organization. Although running as an unaffiliated candidate, Prettyman has been indorsed by the Independent Democrats and by the Tax Reduction Democrats of Montgomery County.

Frank M. Bell.

Staunton, Va., Sept. 6.—Frank M. Bell, 68, well known Augusta County farmer, died at his home near Middlebrook Saturday of pneumonia. The funeral was held Monday at Hebron Presbyterian Church. He is survided by his wife, formerly Miss Mary Moore Tribbett, of this county; two sisters, Miss Mattie Bell, Staunton; Mrs. R. N. Gaw, Charlottesville.

Wife Threatens to Go to Jail, Mate Buys Dog, Dissuades Her

Mrs. William T. McCracken, of Chevy Chase, Md., shown with Muggsy II, which she acquired at the District Pound yesterday, after having been found guilty in Rockville court of permitting an unmuzzled dog to roam the streets. The original Muggsy who caused Mrs. McCracken's appearance in court, had been sent to West Virginia a few days ago.

Fined $12.50 for Permitting Unmuzzled Animal to Rove Chevy Chase, Couple Purchase New Mongrel From D. C. Pound.

The William T. McCrackens had "dog trouble" yesterday, but they weren't discouraged. In fact, they bought another dog—from the District do gpound.

Trouble struck as Mrs. McCracken, whose husband is an examiner in the U. S. Patent Office, was found guilty in Rockville Police Court of permitting an unmuzzle dog to rove the neighborhood around their home, 7 East Underwood street, Chevy Chase.

Mrs. McCracken, however, promptly threw the court into an uproar withthe announcement she would serve ten days in jail rather than pay the $12.50 fine assessed by Judge Harold C. Smith.

Things started humming in police court with Mr. McCracken as the defendant to a charge of harboring a nuisance, disturbing the peace and allowing an unmuzzled dog to roam the setreets.

Granted a jury trial on the unmuzzled dog charge, McCracken pleaded not guilty but lost. As the judge prepared to pass sentence and demanded to know who owned the dog which caused the dispute, McCracken entered the picture by claiming ownership.

"Just to Satisfy Neighbors."

Judge Smith instructed McCracken to sit down, a warrant was sworn out against Mrs. McCracken and she was found guilty. In answer to the court's sentence she announced she would take the 10 days "just to satisfy my neighbors."

Her husband, foreseeing days without hot breakfast and dinner, persuaded her to forego her intentions, however.

"I told her there just wasn't any point in it," he said, admitting he painted a gloomy picture of jail life.

At his home yesterday afternoon "resting up" from the court skirmish, Mr. McCracken explained he had sent the trouble-making dog to West Virginia two days ago.

"His name was Muggsy and I supose he was the 'fightingest' dog I ever saw," he said. "We raised him from a pup. He was a nice dog, it's just some of my neighbors ideas—this court trouble."

In Comes the Dog.

As Mr. McCracken talked, Mrs. McCracken entered followed by a nondescript dog of a tannish-yellow hue.

"That's Muggsy II," Mr. McCracken volunteered. "He looked so much like Muggsy that we got him to fill Muggsy's place."

He added that Muggsy II came from the District dog pound, where he and his wife paid $2 to get the dog out. They only paid $1 for the first Muggsy.

Mr. McCracken explained that the first Muggsy had a "broader forehead" and was part bull, hound and German shepherd dog, whereas Muggsy II is "just a dog."

The neighbors are not going to find anything to complain about in Muggsy II, the McCrackens declared. They said they had a muzzle ready for him to wear outdoors.

School to Open Tomorrow at 9 In Alexandria

Denominational Institutions Set Later Dates to Begin Classes.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU. 907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va. Phone Temple 3767 Delivery Service, phone Alex. 1400.

City schools will reopen at 9 a. m. tomorrow for the 1938-39 session. St. Mary's Parochial School, at Royal and Wolfe streets, also will reopen tomorrow. Registration began yesterday and will continue today.

St. Mary's Academy, conducted by the Sisters of the Holy Cross, will reopen Monday, September 12; the Episcopal High School, just west of Alexandria, plans to reopen Monday, September 19; the Episcopal Theological Seminary of Virginia, Tuesday, September 20, and St. Agnes' Episcopal School for Girls Thursday, September 22.

Principals of all white units in the public school system will meet today at 10 a. m. with Superintendent T. C. Williams, in the George Washington School building. At 2 p. m. he will meet principals of the colored schools at the Parker-Gray School. Meeting of principal and teaching staff will be held at each of the city schools at 2 p. m. today.

Tomorrow pupils will report at 9 o'clock and be assigned to classes and given book lists, and all arrangements made for the Thursday session.

The meeting scheduled for yesterday to inspect the annex to George Washington High School will be held today, as State School Architect Raymond V. Long was delayed.

Supt. Williams said yesterday that while the electrical work in the annex is not completed, it is not expected this will delay school opening, as temporary gongs will be installed.

The meeting of the Mary Custis Lee-Seventeenth Virginia Regiment Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, to have been held last night, was postponed until tonight, at 8 o'clock, in Lee Camp Hall. All committee chairmen for the annual convention of the Virginia Division, U. D. C., to be held in Alexandria in October, are requested to be present.

Captain of Police John S. Arnold has returned from Toronto, Canada, where he attended the meeting of the International Association of Police Chiefs. Capt. and Mrs. Arnold motored to Callander to see the Dionne quintuplets.

Prince Georges Board Adopts Milk Ordinance

Law to Require Licenses for Dealers, Examinations of Dairy Herds.

A milk ordinance for Prince Georges County, to become effective January 1, 1939, was tentatively adopted by the board of commissioners at their meeting yesterday in Upper Marlboro.

Final draft of the ordinance will be drawn at a meeting September 23, in the court house at Upper Marlboro.

Submitted by Dr. A. B. Hooton, county health officer, the ordinance provides for testing and grading of milk and other dairy products, and will require dealers selling milk in the county to obtain a license. Other provisions include periodical examination of dairy herds supplying milk for county consumption, and establisment of certain standards governing construction and upkeep of dairy barns.

The ordinance has been aproved by the State health department and the United States Bureau of Public Health, Dr. Hooton said.

Following a protest by a civic delegation from College Park, the board off commissioners instructed its secretary, James S. Heal, to warn George F. Rosenfeld against continued operation of a cinder block factory in the residential section of that community.

The delegation was headed by Dr. Thomas B. Symons, acting dean of the College of Agriculture at the University of Maryland, and former Prof. C. P. Close. They charged the block factory constituted a public nuisance and was being operated in violation of the zoning ordinance.

The annual "firemen's college," which opened at the University of Maryland yesterday, was credited by Chief Karl Young, of the Mount Rainier Volunteer Fire Department, with having caused a drop of 20 per cent in the fire underwriters' insurance rates in that town.

Young, who is also president of the Maryland Firemen's Association, spoke at the opening session, attended by 10 firemen from various sections of the State.

Other speakers were Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the university; Dean S. S. Steinberg, of the College of Engineering, and Chief John O'Lexey, chairman of the State Fire Extension Committee.

At the afternoon and night sessions lectures were given by Capt. A. L. Headlough, of Akron, Ohio, on "Residential Fires," and by Walter Quick, assistant State forrester, on "Forest Fires."

The Mount Rainier and Annapolis companies gave fire fighting demonstrations on the university campus last night. The "college" will continue through Friday.

PWA Approval Of Arlington Sewers Sought

Plans Sent to Atlanta as Streets Are Prepared for Storm Drains.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST, Clarendon, Va., Tel. OXford 0569.

Plans and specifications for storm sewers to cost $27,500 in Virginia Highlands and Ballston sections of the county, a part of the PWA projects, were sent to division headquarters at Atlanta yesterday for official approval.

County Manager Frank C. Hanrahan said bids will be called for as soon as the plans are approved. Engineers are working on plans for other projects under the PWA, which will be forwarded to Atlanta on completion.

With construction of storm sewers expected to start this month, county road forces are rapidly completing extensive road work through the business section of Clarendon.

Completed work includes grading, widening and surfacing North Irving street from Wilson boulevard to North Tenth street and grading and surface treating North Garfield street from Wilson boulevard to North Franklin road. Curb and gutters were laid on both streets.

North Highland street is being widened from North Washington boulevard to a point beyond the Clarendon Baptist Church. The street is also being graded, surface treated and curbs and gutters constructed.

Plans also provide for widening, grading and surface treating North Hudson street from Wilson boulevard to North Thirteenth street.

The August report of Miss Eleanor Leonard, county librarian, showed 588 more persons visited the libraries in August than in July. The total number of persons who visited the seven libraries was 3,772.

The report shows 1,100 books properly filed at the Aurora Hills Library with 300 mended.

Miss Leonard says the great progress which has been made during the past year in the county libraries has been largely due to the hearty co-operation given by the many volunteer workers.

Edward Douglass White Council, No. 2473, Knights of Columbus, will sponsor a benefit card party at their hall located on North Washington boulevard at Clarendon tomorrow night at 8 o'clock.

Paul Wooten of Washington will be guest speaker at the luncheon meeting of Arlington Kiwanis Club today. The meeting will be held at 12:30 o'clock at Washington Golf and Country Club.

Delegates and alternates to the annual district convention to be held in October will be named at today's meeting.

Plans for the Constitution Day celebration and dinner of the Arlington County Republican Committee will be made tomorrow night at the Clarendon Community House.

The dinner will be held September 17 at the George Mason Hotel in Alexandria.

County Chairman Lawrence Michael announces that delegates to the Virginia Federation of Young Republicans at Richmond will be named at the meeting.

The Guard of Honor of Arlington Post No. 139, American Legion, meets at 8 o'clock tonight at Legion Hall, North Washington boulevard, Clarendon.

Palmiro Giuliani Dies Here at 70

Palmiro Giuliani, 16 Q street northwest, for nearly 50 years a resident of the District, died early yesterday at the age of 70.

Well known in the restaurant trade, Mr. Giuliani operated a delicatessen at Florida avenue and North Capitol street for many years. He was a native of Boveglio, Italy, and came to the United States at the age of 21, settling in Washington.

Requiem mass will be celebrated Friday morning at 9 o'clock at the Holy Rosary Catholic Church by the Rev. Nicholas de Carlo. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Mr. Giuliani leaves a daughter, Mrs. Mary Sabatini, and a son, Julius Giuliani, both of Washington.

Fairfax County List of Pupils Will Set Record

6,900 Students Expected as Schools Commence Semester Today.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST, P. O. BOX 245, Fairfax, Va. Phone Falls Church 2688-M.

A record enrollment is expected in the public schools of Fairfax County, which open tomorrow morning for the 1938-39 school year. Superintendent W. T. Woodson said yesterday.

Approximately 6,900 pupils are anticipated. The total enrollment last year was 6,691 and, based upon previous records, the annual increase is around 200 pupils, Woodson explained.

Many of the county school centers are already overcrowded, Woodson said, and the $375,000 school building program just launched by the county school board will not offer much relief until the opening of the 1939-40 term. The building program was started when a grant of $169,000 was made available by the Public Works Administration for school building in the county.

Construction under the program is expected to get under way next week at Annandale and Franconia schools, where two new classrooms will be added to each building. Woodson said the school board, which meets today, again expects the greatest congestion to be at the Annandale, Groveton and Woodlawn elementary schools and the Fairfax High School. Congestion in the Falls Church School will be relieved by the withdrawal of Arlington County students. At the time East Falls Church withdrew from the corporation under an agreement between the remainder of the corporation and Arlington County, the pupils residing in East Falls Church were allowed to attend the Falls Church School until the end of the last school session.

The Annandale players will open the fall season of activities of the Annandale School with a dance Friday night beginning at 9 o'clock. The committee in charge of arrangements includes John C. Webb, chairman; Harry L. Carrico, Miss Leona Rollins, Miss Virginia Thornton and M. L. Bates.

Miss Mary Walton McCandlish, chairman of the committee on public welfare of the Fairfax County Chamber of Commerce, has announced the appointment of committee members. They are J. W. Brookfield and Mrs. E. R. White, of Springfield; James E. Bauserman, Louis A. Montague and W. Lewis Leigh, of Fairfax; Dr. William Meyer and Miss Edith Rogers, of Herndon; Elmer T. Ayre, of Clifton; Mrs. W. T. Louk, of Vienna; J. Golden Blincoe, of Burke; E. L. Potter, of McLean; Mrs. W. D. Brookings, of Seminary, and Mrs. H. W. Walker, of Accotink.

Dr. Byrd Starts U. of Maryland PWA Projects

Breaks Ground on Deadline for Opening of Building Program.

The University of Maryland's $2,500,000 State and PWA building program got under way yesterday with President H. C. Byrd breaking ground for the first project, a $30,280 addition to the infirmary at College Park.

When Dr. Byrd turned the first spadeful of earth before a group of university officials and visiting volunteer firemen attending the annual short course a College Park, the PWA's requirement that work be started within eight weeks from the time the grant was offered was fulfilled. Yesterday was the deadline.

The new addition will include space for 24 additional beds, four isolation rooms, an emergency room and a new kitchen. Contract for construction of the addition has been awarded to the A. E. Pessagno Co., of Washington, and work is expected to be completed in three months.

Additional construction to be started soon includes a new men's dormitory and poultry building at College Park and additions to the university hospital and dental and pharmacy building in Baltimore.

The PWA grant of $1,024,650 was approved last June. This money will be matched with funds allocated to the university by the 1937 State Legislature.

Second Man Dies In Mystery Auto Crash in Maryland

Marion Fulton Nichols, 25, of Salisbury, Md., died yesterday in an Eastern Shore hospital second victim of a mysterious automobile crash which Monday night killed an Alexandria, Va., man.

Laurence Coulson, 26, of Alexandria was found dead behind the wheel of a roadster smashed against a tree on the Ocean City road near Pittsville. Beside him was Nichols, unconscious.

State police said they believed Coulson fell asleep at the wheel. A coroner's jury at Pittsville yesterday concluded Coulson's death was due to "unknown causes" but that it was accidental. A second inquest is scheduled for Nichols.

Col. Halpine's Funeral Set for This Afternoon

Funeral services for Lieut. Col. Kenneth M. Halpine, U. S. Army, who died at Vancouver Barracks, Wash., last Thursday, will be held at 1:30 p. m. today, with full military honors, in section 6 of Arlington Cemetery. Chaplain Ora J. Cohee will officiate.

Race Clear-Cut, New Deal Test, Lewis Asserts

Roosevelt Would Support 'Any Truly Liberal,' Tydings Foe Says.

By James D. Secrest.

The Maryland Democratic Senatorial campaign was designted as a clear-cut test of the New Deal last night by Representative David J. Lewis in a radio address as both he and Senator Millard E. Tydings entered the last lap of their race for nomination next Monday.

Personalities are secondary in the contest, the 69-year-old liberal declared, and President Roosevelt would have supported any other truly liberal candidate who opposed Tydings in the campaign.

Lewis' address, coming on the heels of the President's Labor Day speech at Denton, was the first comment from either candidate on Mr. Roosevelt's plea for an alignment of liberals and the nomination of Representative Lewis. In his interpretation of the President's speech, Lewis cast aside the anonymous references to "Mr. A," and labeled Tydings as a representative of "the old deal in its fullest flower."

"Poses As Great Martyr."

"Let us see why President Roosevelt is making this fight, why he is suffering such abuse from the reactionary press," Lewis said. "Why has he taken long and arduous trips through this and other States for the sake of his candidates?

"The headlines in your newspapers, of course, would have you believe he had made this long pilgrimage to the Eastern Shore for me. But I have no illusions as to that. The President would have given equal support to any other truly liberal candidate.

"Mr. Tydings, of course, also would have you believe that the President undertook his Maryland visit in retaliation against him. He poses as the great martyr, pretends that the President and the Administration have something against him personally.

"But Mr. Tydings also should have no illusions. In this race, he and I, as personalities, are relatively unimportant; but we are important in relation to the principles for which we stand."

Keeps Silent on "Invasion."

While Lewis was talking over the air, Senator Tydings was jumping about Baltimore, making a half dozen brief political talks. He continued to maintain a strict silence as to the President's "invasion" of Maryland.

Tydings was scheduled to address a county political rally tonight in Towson, seat of Baltimore County, and return to Prince Georges County for a speech at Seat Pleasant on Saturday. Lewis will go on the air again tonight with the talk to be carried by Station WRC at 8:30 p. m.

Up until last night Tydings' advisers had urged him to ignore the President's Denton address, but it was believed the "interpretation" given it by his opponent will compel the Senator to make a reply before the end of the week.

While most political observers expressed opinions the President's trip into Maryland helped Lewis, but insufficiently to take away Tydings' lead, Lewis, in his address last night, showed no signs of relenting in his attacks on the present Maryland Senator for his legislative record.

He recalled portions of Mr. Roosevelt's Denton address in support of charges that Tydings is stirring up class prejudice and is seeking to drive a wedge between farmers and labor.

Hits at Red Herrings.

"Nowhere has the issue between conservative and liberal been drawn in more contrasting colors than in this primary race in the State of Maryland," Lewis said.

"All of you who heard or read the President's speech knew what he was referring to when he spoke of those who were trying deliberately "to create prejudice and class feeling which can be charitably explained only as political hysteria.

"You know and I know he was referring to the attempt by Tydings and men of his type, both in and out of Maryland, to raise the red flag of communism, to attach a C. I. O. tag to every progressive political campaign such as mine.

"You also know to whom the President was referring when he spoke of the 'minority' which is trying to drive a wedge between the farmers on the one hand and their relatives and logical partners in the cities on the other.' He was referring specifically to the cry of communism which Mr. Tydings has raised among the farmers, particularly on the Eastern Shore.

"He was referring to the paid advertisements in the newspapers, maliciously branding both the President and me Communists, in an effort to widen the gap between the farmer and his natural friend, the workingman in the city, drive a wedge between them not merely to defeat me, but to defeat all liberal legislation aiming toward the improvement of the farmer and labor."

Links Davies to Tydings.

The name of Joseph E. Davies, United States Ambassador to Belgium and father-in-law of Senator Tydings, was injected into the campaign by Lewis in an attempt to portray the Senator as a foe rather than a friend of the farmer.

The Tydings law firm, he said, represents the Fairfield Western Maryland Dairy Corporation, biggest dairy distributor of the State.

"This, in turn," he added, "is part of the greatest milk company in the world, the National Dairy Products. It is none other than the law firm of Tydings' father-in-law in Washington, Joseph Davies.

"Thus between them Tydings and his father-in-law represent the greatest dairy firms, both in the State and in the Nation. Altogether there are 124 milk, cheese and ice cream companies incorporated in this vast chain . . . In certain areas it constitutes a monopoly."

James Fitzgerald, of Chevy Chase, will speak at 6:15 o'clock tonight over Station WBAL, Baltimore, in behalf of Tydings.

value and quality readily discernible to the consumer.

This would be done on the theory that independents at a disadvantage with strong corporate organizations in a competitive market would find a more ready sale for their lesser known products of gasolin, textiles or numerous othr commodities.

In his arguments before the House Agriculture Committee for his original farm commodity standardization bill, Sumners declared it would "broaden opportunity and give us a chance to keep real competition alive, but to escape the necessity of taking over the control and internal administration of business organization."

A clew to his plan is said to be provided in published hearings on his bill to establish a farm produce exchange in the Sixty-sixth Congress.

"It is absurd to try to destroy by prohibitory acts of legislatures or judgments of courts great organizations, at least, without providing a substitute," he said at that time.

"When we were on the headwaters of commerce a big bridge was not necessary. We have moved far down the stream now, and only a big bridge can span the distance. Our policy heretofore has been merely to dynamite the privately owned bridges of commerce monopolistic of the charges excessive. Of course, the public in each instance has had to pay for the repairs and the principal and interest on interrupted earnings. Ours should be a constructive rather than a destructive policy."

Lewis around to neigboring Democratic newspapers during office hours, asks the editors of county papers to give publicity to Lewis during office hours, and is, in fact, the leader of the Lewis campaign in the county where she resides."

In Upper Marlboro, Magruder called the Tydings report "absolutely a falsehood."

"I have made no statement except to show my employes the limits imposed on them by the Federal regulations," he said. "I have not and don't intend to tell any employes in my office how they shall vote."

Mrs. Toulson, Salisbury postmistress, denied she had even "been in an automobile with Mr. Lewis" or had ever taken advantage of her position as postmaster.

Cites Loyalty to Roosevelt.

"I have done nothing irregular," said Mrs. Toulson. "I have already been investigated by the Senate committee. My motives have not been personal. I am not interested personally in either Mr. Tydings or Mr. Lewis. My whole interest in the matter has been my allegiance to President Roosevelt. If this loyalty and allegiance to President Roosevelt has caused me to do things which some persons may believe irregular, while I deeply regret it, I am perfectly willing to pay the price."

Tydings' charges were mailed along with his campaign report and attached as an answer to Question 10 of the Senate committee's questionnaire. He said his allegations against the Salisbury postmistress and the Baltimore internal revenue collecter (neither of whom he mentioned by name), are "known or could easily be known from the public press of Washington and Maryland to the postal authorities of the United States."

He added two further charges.

"A man in Mr. Lewis' headquarters," he said, "namely, Eugene Casey, publicity director for the Lewis campaign, issued a statement in the public press as follows: 'They either vote for Lewis, or out they go,' referring definitely in that statement to the Federal officeholders.

Tydings Willing to Testify.

"The postoffice at Havre de Grace was invaded by a man who does not work for the Government, Mr. Hobart, one of Mr. Lewis' contact men, who talked with the employes and then went around town hunting for a new postmaster to take the place of the postmaster, stating frankly that he wanted to embarrass me.

"These are but a few of the instances, most of which are matters of frequent conversation by the citizens of this State, and known to thousands of our people and some of them have happened within my own sight and hearing, which I am willing to testify, under oath, to be true before any investigators which you may care to send."

The Senate committee's investigation of the Maryland contest was originally launched at the request of Lewis, who asked an inquiry into charges by Tydings' backers that the Lewis campaign was financed by the C. I. O. and who also asked an investigation of Tydings contributions. Both candidates later contacted the committee by telephone, to request that investigators interview them.

Opposing candidates in the Ohio senatorial campaign, meanwhile, submitted financial statements. Robert A. Taft, the Republican nominee, reported expenditures totaling $52,566. Taft said he had received no contributions directly, but his campaign committee listed receipts aggregating $30,968, and unpaid bills of $4,620. Senator Bulkley, the Democratic nominee, reported $20,827 spent and his committee said $27,890 had been contributed to his campaign.

Senators Request Report.

Senator McCarran, seeking renomination in Nevada's primaries, yesterday reported personal contributions of $130 and expenditures of $191. The Senate Committee wrote a letter to "Committee for Re-election Pat McCarran" at Ely, Nev., requesting a report from that group.

Besides contributions of $37,024 and expenditures of $35,957, the Tydings report to the committee yesterday showed $11,869 additional in unpaid bills and $520 in personal expenditures.

Lewis recently reported $7,725 in contributions to his own campaign, $7,775 in expenditures and $5,145 in unpaid bills.

Colmar Man Votes Today on Town Hall

Citizens of Colmar Manor, Md., will vote today on an amended request for a PWA grant and a bond issue for a municipal building to cost $30,000. Polls will open in town hall at noon and close at 9 p. m.

A PWA grant of $4,500 and a supplementary bond issue of $5,500 for a $10,000 edifice already have been approved. The larger building would be 60 by 100 feet and would contain an auditorium, council chamber and clerk's office.

Back From Holiday.

Following a completion of his role in Paramount's "Spawn of the North," George Raft went to Hot Springs, Ark., for a vacation, but is back ready to go into "St. Louis Blues" with Dorothy Lamour.

Convict Flees Chain Gang.

Norman Williams, 21, colored, serving 61 days for speeding, walked away from a Montgomery County road gang yesterday while at work with fellow prisoners on the Clarksburg-Lewisdale road. Police of Maryland, Virginia and the District sought him early today.

Liquor Board Plans to Close 'Joints' in D. C.

Retail Stores and Cafes Aiding Bootleggers, Offut Charges.

The Alcoholic Beverage Control Board yesterday promised to purge the District of so-called "liquor joints" violating ethical standards.

George W. Offutt, chairman of the board, declared many serious complaints have been received charging licensees with "bad faith." He explained this included retailers aiding and abetting bootleggers, who cannot purchase package goods from wholesalers; restaurants which "allow people to stay there hour after hour sopping up all the beer they can hold," and proprietors of liquor or beer establishments operating in "unfit locations."

"We're going to purge the Nation's Capital of these 'joints' by refusing them renewals of licenses next February," Offutt stated.

"One of the most flagrant violators is the restaurateur who has made the selling of food a sideline," he declared. "He now devotes most of his time selling beer to his customers and sells very little food."

The board, composed of Mrs. Agnes K. Mason, Isaac Gans and Offutt, met yesterday in executive session to formulate plans for the "purge."

Offutt said the board would request additional police to check violators and report them. He explained a special squad has been at work for some time, and a full report would be forthcoming before October, when the board will meet with the District Commissioners.

One retailer was charged with selling package goods to bootleggers.

"Bootlegger Thrives."

"The bootlegger still thrives in Washington," Offutt declared, "and he has been able to induce retailers to sell him large quantities of package goods, which he in turn peddles by the drink in 'joints.'"

Operators of stores retailing beer and liquor, who were able to receive a license to operate in certain localities, may come under the "pudge" because of changing neighborhoods, Offutt said. He explained that in some cases neighborhoods which previously were termed "fit" for consumption and sales of beer or liquor are now termed "unfit."

Offutt said he would not seek court action against the violators, but would simply refuse them a license next February. He said this would not apply, of course, where an infraction of the laws and regulations of the A. B. C. Board is concerned.

Eight Police on Job.

At present, in addition to the special investigators, some eight police are constantly on the alert for infractions.

One source of revenue for bootleggers who peddle packaged goods occurs on Sundays and after 2 a. m. on week days, when the sale of liquor is prohibited in Washington.

"The bootlegger buys the package goods from the retailer and sells the goods illegally on Sundays and after 2 a. m. on week days," Offutt said.

U. S. to Shift Railroad From Shasto Dam Site

A contract was signed yesterday by the Department of Interior and the Southern Pacific Railroad under which the Bureau of Reclamation will relocate 36.4 miles of the main line to make way for the proposed Shasta Dam.

The rails following the Sacramento River Canyon run directly through the dam and reservoir site. It is estimated that two years would be required to finish the work. Construction is now under way on a tunnel through which trains may by-pass work on the dam, which is expected to be started soon.

U.S. Makes Oreg. Woods Conservation Laboratory

Only 4 Released As Two Criminal Juries Are Picked

Accepting few excuses, Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue, in District Court yesterday quickly selected two criminal court juries to serve until the fall term of court.

Only four men of the large number called upon to appear for duty were released, all in "one-man" businesses that would expire if they were not able to work. Criminal court trials will start today.

Justice Joseph W. Cox will take over Motions Court today and Bolitha J. Laws, who has been confirmed but not sworn in as associate justice, will take over Police Court, the top floor of which will be used by the District Court after Saturday. Laws is to be sworn in in Criminal Court No. 1 Saturday at 10 a. m.

Gasoline Process To Reduce Oil Use

Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 6 (AP).—A new process of making gasoline from gases will reduce the Nation's crude oil consumption by 625,000,000 barrels a year and extend known oil supplies 150 per cent, two Chicago chemists declared today.

The new method, developed by the Universal Oil Products Co. of Chicago, is one of "catalytic polymerization" or combining the ethane, propane and butane gases from oil wells and refineries into a gasoline with an anti-knock rating of 80, well suited for either automobile or airplane use.

County Refuses School Cost Aid For Greenbelt

State Funds Are Denied to U. S. Community; FHA Offers $27,305.

The Greenbelt (Md.) high and elementary schools will open today with two teachers less than requested because Prince Georges County authorities yesterday declined to accept a proposal to operate the schools out of State or county tax funds.

Following a conference between the board of education and county commissioners at Upper Marlboro, School Superintendent Orem announced no more teachers would be hired until the question of salaries had been settled.

Meanwhile, it was announced, Farm Security Administration officials, the county commissioners and board of education would discuss the Greenbelt situation at the courthouse September 27.

Last year, with only half of the 685 families now living in Greenbelt, the FSA contributed $26,000 to the county in lieu of taxes for operation of the high and elementary schools at the Government's model town. This year the FSA has offered $27,305 for both schools, although the county estimates the cost will be $38,900.

While not willing to pay for the operation of either school, county officials have agreed, however, to pay the FSA $9,650 for the deucation of county pupils at the Greenbelt High School. About half of the pupils at the school, it is estimated, will be from the county.

County school officials have notified Hugo C. Schwartz, head of the public finance unit of the FSA, that no appropriation will be made out of the current or future State budget "for education of children living on the tax-exempt Government reservation at Greenbelt unless and until the Maryland Legislature decrees otherwise."

To date Greenbelt residents have paid no direct taxes, either State or county.

Constructive Loans.

When a convict has served his prison term the presumption is that he has thereby paid his debt to society and has every right to a fresh start. With this in mind modern penal institutions, such as Lorton, teach their prisoners useful trades and make every effort to give them a healthier social outlook than they had before they were put into confinement.

All too often, however, release from prison is merely the prelude to a new career of crime. In some instances this may be due to incorrigibility on the part of the former convict. But in far too many cases renewed criminality is primarily the result of society's careless handling of a difficult and delicate problem. Without family, without friends, without funds to keep body and soul together, many well-meaning former prisoners drift back into crime because there is practically no alternative for them.

For this reason the proposal made by Mr. Wilbur La Roe, jr., chairman of the Parole Board and head of the Committee on Civic Affairs of the Washington Federation of Churches, is very well taken. Mr. La Roe urges the establishment of a revolving fund to provide those released from prison at the end of their terms with a little more money than is vouchsafed them at present. In many cases those who now leave Lorton do so with only $5 or $6 and the blessings of the warden. When that money is exhausted the former prisoner is usually up against it.

Mr. La Roe believes that a fund of no more than $8,000 would be needed to provide former convicts with a more reasonable stake with which to make a fresh start. And he believes that at least half of the money advanced in this manner would be repaid. The estimated annual deficit of $4,000 would be little enough in comparison with the potential benefits involved. Careful assistance to former convicts until they can obtain remunerative employment would certainly cut down the incidence of crime.

The need for such a fund is pointed by the fact that it is the more dangerous convicts who most need to be shielded against the temptation of returning to paths of crime. Paroled prisoners are already taken care of, since the Board of Parole ordinarily does not release men until jobs are available for them.

A Putsch In Chile.

Monday's abortive revolt in Chile was the second of Fascist complexion to occur in South America during the last three months. As was the case with the Integralista uprising at Rio last June, the Nacista putsch at Santiago this week was speedily put down by the authorities.

Like the Brazilian Integralistas, the Chilean National Socialists have borrowed much of their ideology and most of their program from the totalitarian dictatorships of Europe. There appears to be no evidence, however, that the current uprising was either prompted or supported by Germany or Italy. On the contrary, the rebellion seems to have been wholly of native origin, with the time-honored Latin-American purpose of putting into power an ambitious politico who saw no hope of achieving his ambitions by peaceful means.

Gen. Carlos Ibanez, former dictator and the idol of the Nacistas, is implicated in the rebellion. It is practically certain that in the presidential elections scheduled for October of this year he would have run a poor third. With or without his connivance, his followers attempted to forestall defeat by seizing the government.

As it happened their efforts aroused the hostility not only of the government but also of practically the entire opposition which, consisting of left-wing parties united in a popular front along French and Spanish lines, has no use for a Nazi or Facist regime. Indeed, the lack of popular support secured by the Nacistas had earlier been demonstrated by their failure, in the election of March 7, 1937, to win more than three of the 146 seats in the lower chamber of the Chilean parliament.

Despite highly-publicized propaganda efforts emanating from Berlin and Rome, European totalitarian ideas appear to be making little headway in Chile or elsewhere in South America. But it is ominous that, as the aftermath of Monday's uprising, the Chilean government is planning to ask the Senate for the right to suspend the constitution for six months.

This creates the suspicion, which may be unjustified, that President Alessandri and his colleagues are using the easily suppressed uprising as a pretext to continue in office in the face of the rising power of the opposition. After six years of constitutional rule, therefore, Chile faces a new period of strong-man government and, paradoxically, for the ostensible purpose of preserving the constitution that is now to be set aside.

Successor To The NRA.

In a Labor Day radio interview Elmer F. Andrews, administrator of the new wage-hour law, said that the national recovery act represented the first effort of the Administration to raise labor standards. The wage-hour act, in his opinion, is the 1938 answer to the problems that the NRA attempted to solve earlier without success.

Judging from the program outlined by Mr. Andrews, the new law is likely to accomplish much more than its over-ambitious predecessor. The main purpose of the much-criticized recovery program was good. One of the chief causes, if not the sole reason for its collapse, even before the Supreme Court decreed its downfall, lay in the attempt of administrative agencies to achieve the impossible.

The linking of trade practice agreements and price policies with wage-and-hour provisions was a fatal error. It was repeatedly pointed out that these trade practice agreements, although undoubtedly intimately linked to wage policies, called for separate administrative handling by qualified experts. Furthermore, the NRA was overwhelmed by the immensity of the task assigned it in trying to organize industries distinctly intrastate in character. Many of them were small and obscure industrial units entirely unripe for self-regulation and too numerous and unimportant to be adequately supervised by Federal regulatory authorities.

In administering the wage-hour measure Mr. Andrews has a tremendously difficult task, but he can at least confine his regulatory efforts to questions relating to wages and hours. And he is under no legal or personal compulsion to attempt to reform American industrial relationships overnight. He knows, indeed, that it cannot be done and is sensibly confining his initial regulatory efforts to a few fairly homogeneous and already well-organized industries. By wise selection he will thus be able to rely heavily upon industrial self-regulation.

For the Federal authorities to assume responsibility for detecting and punishing potentially innumerable violations of wages and hours provisions in every State would be an impossible task. Mr. Andrews, therefore, has wisely chosen to rely upon industry itself to report violations of the regulations by "chiseling" employers.

If the standards imposed seem reasonable to the great majority of those concerned, their co-operation can be relied upon to force compliance upon the recalcitrant and selfish minority. In the case of the NRA there were many instances in which code provisions were left to the determination of small, dominant groups of industrialists whose interests were not always identical with that of smaller competitors. In such cases so-called industrial self-regulation is non-representative and discriminatory.

Under the present wage-hour law the administrator evidently hopes to act chiefly as an umpire, quick to heed complaints of infractions of the rules but reluctant to intervene of his own initiative. Regulatory legislation of this kind depends for its success upon the co-operation of private interests while not leaving industry entirely unsupervised and thus free to oppress weaker elements or impose upon the public.

Mr. Andrews might, if he chose to do so, use the wide discretionary powers conferred upon him in such a way as to become an industrial czar. But he has also been given full facilities for consulting with the interests affected by wage-and-hour decrees. That it is his purpose to guide rather than dictate the regulations promulgated in the interest of wage earners, employers and the public is emphasized in all that he has said since assuming office.

Magnanimities.

One of the main purposes, we take it, behind international sports contests is the promotion of international good feeling through the cultivation of sportsmanship. But if we can believe such authorities as Mr. John R. Tunis and others, the result has been rather opposite to the intention.

What were once mere games have become expressions of the most exaggerated national passions and thus take on the significance, almost, of diplomatic incidents. An Olympiad, it seems, can create nearly as many international tensions as an army maneuver. A boxer like Carnera or Schmeling, so unlucky as to cause his nation a loss of face, returns to his homeland in much the same predicament as a defeated French Revolutionary general, returning to face the wrath of the convention.

It is rather hard, however, to square this pessimistic viewpoint with the behavior of the crowd which watched the Davis Cup finals yesterday at Germantown. That crowd stormed and bellowed with rage when, at two critical stages of the play, the umpire declared a series of footfaults on service. The point is that the crowd was overwhelmingly American while the player against whom the faults were declared was Adrian Quist, of the Australian team, which was making an amazingly game fight to come from behind.

But not less remarkable than this vociferous magnanimity of the crowd was the attitude of Harry Hopman, the Australian captain. After a brief conference with Gibbons, Hopman declared that the umpire's rulings were absolutely just. He was even overheard saying to Quist: "Adrian, the call was right. You must not hop in serving."

There, indeed, was sportsmanship! Does it not seem a pretty far cry from the state of affairs some twenty years from now foreseen by Mr. Tunis in an article in Harpers when the star of a Japanese tennis team will "commit hara kiri on the center court rather than return defeated to Japan to be killed by an angry populace?"

Or does what happened at Philadelphia on Monday have an international significance after all? Could it be interpreted as an expression of the self-interest which now unites the surviving democracies of the world?

Liberal Or Socialist?

In giving his definition of a "conservative" and a "liberal," on Monday, Mr. Roosevelt described the former as one who admitted many social evils and abuses but "declined to take any lead in solving these problems in co-operation with his government." The presumption is that "conservative Mr. A" would, in his fumbling way, be willing to co-operate in nongovernmental efforts for progress.

Mr. Roosevelt's "composite liberal," on the other hand, "not only admitted the needs and the problems like Mr. A, but he put his shoulder under the load . . . in co-operation with government." Liberal Mr. B, said the President, believes that "the past should be brought up to the present by using every legitimate instrument to do the job, government included."

The trouble with this definition is that it conflicts with universal usage outside of the United States. In all other countries the Mr. B's, who rely primarily on government to effectuate reforms, are called socialists. The Mr. A's, who want social progress, but doubt the efficacy of government in securing it, are called liberals. And the conservatives are those who don't worry very much so long as they themselves are comfortable.

Another difficulty with Mr. Roosevelt's definition is its implication that the more one relies on government for reform, the more liberal one is. By this token liberalism has reached its climax in Russia, and is advancing rapidly to perfection under the decree rule of Hitler and Mussolini.

Historic liberalism, Mr. Roosevelt might recall, came into being through opposition to the arbitrary exercise of power by the state. Many real liberals strongly object to the idea that "the past should be brought up to the present" if that means converting democracy into dictatorship. Many Democrats, to sharpen the issue, don't see why they should become socialists because the head of the party tells them it is "liberal" to do so.

Blood Royal.

Since Washington's record of traffic accidents has for the most of this year compared with the declining curve for the Nation in general, we should take the more satisfaction in the showing for Labor Day. Inside the District limits there were only a few minor crashes. But there was little or no mitigation of the annual Labor Day slaughter on America's highways. The count of dead stood last night at 278.

The most celebrated of these victims was the unhappy Count Covadonga, who in renouncing his hereditary claims to the nonexistent throne of Spain, could not renounce, poor fellow, his hereditary disease of hemophilia. The injuries he received in the crash at Miami, Fla., appear to have been no more than a few slight cuts. But because of the incurable deficiencies in his blood and the incurable weakness of his vascular system these cuts were quite enough to kill him.

Count Covadonga was one of the last of Europe's ill-destined royal hemophiliacs, who have served to make the name of this disease almost as well known as tuberculosis or endocarditis. Among the others were his younger brother, who also died of bleeding, and the little Tsarevitch, so often in danger of it, who survived only to die from Bolshevist bullets.

The extinction of these will have nothing to do with the extinction of the "royal disease." Had they lived, and had children, they would have passed on their affliction. For one of the strangest things about this strange propensity for bleeding to death is that while it afflicts only the males of a race it is invariably transmitted by the women.

The Real McCoy.

From the Brooklyn Daily Eagle.

It is becoming an increasingly hard life for the word "authentic." Take a simple instance. The film producer wants to portray some "typical" college girls in a new picture. He scouts a number of campuses and what does he find? That the "typical" Betty Co-ed does not exist—that is, the type which the public has built up in its mind as a result, largely, of fictional (including movie) representation.

Therefore, the producer must search among his usual throngs of Hollywood extras for "authentic" types of co-eds, most of whom have never been near a college campus.

The same thing happens when the producer decides on a film with an Ozark background. He sends a director to a little town in Missouri to hire 200 "authentic" hill-billies. What happens? The real hill-billies are not recognized by the scout, but a truck driver is engaged on the spot because he has a fine, flowing, handle-bar mustache and looks like the movieman's conception of the public's conception of a hill-billy.

And when news of the truck driver's luck gets around, hill-billies pour out of the Ozarks to buy elixirs and grow the beards and mustaches that the public thinks they should be wearing to be "authentic." If future historians accept the movie portrait of us, our descendants are going to have a hoarse laugh at our expense.

The Political Pot.

All communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the Editor's discretion. In fairness to other correspondents, brevity is requested. Letters are subject to condensation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If Andrew Jackson could see the recent letters in The Post signed "Andrew Jackson's Cousin," he would not only turn over in his grave, but he would thunder his favorite oath, "By the Eternal," and express his disapproval in the robust language he could so effectively use.

"A. J. C." insists that "we were talking about the President's invasion of the primaries, not about malefactors of great wealth as Mr. Gale would try to imply." As a matter of fact, we were discussing both subjects, for both are inextricably involved in the "purge." If so-called Democrats in Congress who are recreant to the basic principles of the democracy to which they falsely profess allegiance, had not become the legislative servants of the "malefactors of great wealth" instead of backing a Democratic President in his fierce struggle against the kaisers of industry, the "purge" would not be necessary.

From the time when he assumed office, Mr. Roosevelt has been endeavoring to carry out a program of progressive democracy. Increasingly, as time went on, he found himself hampered by obstructionists among Congressmen in his own party. This sabotage has continued to a far greater degree since the election of 1936, in which the voters showed their approval of his policies in the first four years and emphatically told him to go ahead in the direction of progressivism. After such a decisive mandate, and after more sabotage than before, he has done the only thing that a self-respecting public leader with backbone and guts could be expected to do. Only a spineless apology for a President would tamely submit to nullification of the will of the people by a reactionary minority of lawmakers that masquerades in the habiliments of Democratic fealty.

The only criticism of Mr. Roosevelt's effort to eliminate men of the Tydings and George type that I have heard from liberal sources has been that he did not start purging the party sooner. Prior to the purge, honest progressives, whose main interest is in the triumph of principles regardless of by what political route, frequently complained because the President meekly tolerated in the high councils of the Democratic Party officeholders who were constantly spiking his humanitarian measures. It looked like weakness or insincerity to endure in silence the opposition of these politicians to administration policies. The vigorous determination of the Executive to take his case to the voters of his party, asking them to nominate candidates not dominated by the malefactors of great wealth, brought enthusiastic commendation from these progressives.

They welcomed proof that the President meant exactly what he said when he denounced selfish plutocratic interests. They were glad to see him assail representatives of such interests who bore the same party label as he. They were gratified to find that he wanted the Democratic Party to be a political unit devoted consistently to progressive principles—not a contradictory mass of liberals and conservatives hating each other's opinions but banded together by the cohesive power of public patronage. It is safe to add that if any alleged Democrats abandon the party because of Roosevelt tian tactics, for every one lost scores of recruits will be gained from believers in Democratic ideals who want to support a party genuinely Democratic, not a party of fake Democracy.

It is precisely because the treachery of pretended Democrats, controlled by the barons of big business, has interfered with representative government, that Franklin D. Roosevelt has made his man-fashion, honorable appeal to the voters. To call his action "invasion" of the States, is a palpable misuse of words. And to object to mention of the malefactors of great wealth in discussing the matter, is to object to dealing with the crux of the whole argument. If the plutocracy and its spokesmen in Congress who dishonestly garb themselves in the raiment of democracy had not repeatedly driven the knife into humanitarian bills, no purging would be required.

Of course, the President's action is not invasion. He is the President of all of the people. The Government is the Government of the entire country. The legislation of Congress affects every State and Congressional district.

The President of all of the people, endeavoring in the face of heavy obstacles and the cunning strategy of shrewd, unscrupulous, rapacious exploiters, to effectuate a program indorsed by a vast majority of all of the people, has an indisputable right to go to any of the people, anywhere, at any time, and tell them that certain Congressmen, by fighting that program, have earned defeat for another term.

LINN A. E. GALE.
Washington, Sept. 2.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The commentators tell us that Charles and St. Marys counties, Md., will go for Senator Tydings notwithstanding anything the President or anyone else may say. Why is this? May it not be a subject of interesting public inquiry?

It is well known that the Catholic Church or Catholic party is supporting Senator Tydings. Charles and St. Marys counties have a large, if not preponderant, Catholic population. Is that the explanation?

It is also well known that the Catholics are supporting Senator George in Georgia; that they supported Senator Smith in South Carolina; were behind Chandler in Kentucky; were a large supporting factor for Senator Clark in Missouri, and for Senator Gillette in Iowa; were supporters of Senator Van Nuys; were against Senator Pope in Idaho and helped to elect his successor; that they are for Senator McCarran, and so on, down the line.

It would appear that the Catholic voters are opposing all the New Deal candidates in all the States, almost without exception, at the present time. If this is admitted, is it not a reasonable subject of inquiry why this attitude of the Church toward the New Deal is taken at this time? Can anyone explain it? Someone can, for there would necessarily be a reason behind such an important action by so large and potent a body as the Roman Church.

Is the Church opposition to the New Deal temporary and only a protest against the court and reorganization bills? It is known the Church does not like the Congressmen who signed the token of good will to the Spanish republic. Is there to be an effort at a purge of those members, Democrats and Republicans alike? Maverick and MacFarlane have gone.

These are questions of large public concern and I hope The Post will let me propound them in its columns, without prejudice, of course, to itself. No active party, not even a Church party, should be immune from discussion in a republic like ours. I may add here that the A. F. L. seems to be aligned recently, politically, against the New Deal. Does this mean a combined alignment in 1940 against the New Deal? H. C. M.
Washington, Sept. 2.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I notice Dr. Bruce L. Taylor, requests you to print in your paper for three days in succession, what the Constitution says are the duties of the President. I would like you to publish, also three days in succession, what it says about the duties of all good and loyal citizens of America to the President.

I am a Virginia Democrat, and have voted the straight Democratic ticket since I became of age. I am a New Dealer and not a Double Dealer. I am 100 per cent for Roosevelt and hope to have the pleasure and privilege of voting for him in 1940, as I think he is one of the greatest Presidents we have ever had. W. BOWMAN CLARK.
Culpeper, Va., Sept. 2.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The members of Congress who are undergoing the Roosevelt purge insist that they have incurred his disfavor because of their stand against his Supreme Court proposal. The President insists that his purge is not based upon opposition to any particular measure, but to their general reactionary attitude.

The reorganization of the Supreme Court was not authorized by the Democratic platform of 1936. The President felt that the liberalization of the Supreme Court which stood squarely athwart the path of his New Deal objective was absolutely necessary even though it required extra-platform action. On all such extraordinary recommendations Congressmen have a perfect right to exercise their own judgment without incurring Presidential disfavor or party discipline.

Neither the Supreme Court reorganization bill nor the Wagner-Van Nuys anti-lynching bill had received platform sanction, and therefore left Senators and Representatives free to follow the dictates of their own judgment and conscience. But it was far different with the Wagner labor act, the wage-and-hour bill, the reorganization of the Government departments or the national security act, which the platform pledged every loyal Democrat to support. The President, therefore, in bringing the recalcitrant members of Congress to account is merely exercising his just prerogative as head of the Democratic Party.

Indeed, the President has expressed satisfaction with the liberalization of the Supreme Court, which took place outside of his own proposal. He has blandly admonished his opponents that although he lost the battle he had won the war. The liberalization proposal is a fait acompli and is no longer a genuine political issue.

The authority universally conceded to the President to act as head of his party and to appoint the chairman of its national committee is wholly extraneous to the Constitution. This conceded authority must carry with it the requisite ways and means of implementation. The President is a blazer of new paths. His latest unprecedented venture will be justified or condemned by its final effect upon the success or failure of the New Deal.

The President has suffered many temporary reverses and setbacks in the course of his brilliant career. His intervention in party primaries may prove to be another instance in which he can loose a battle yet win the war. KELLY MILLER.
Washington, Sept. 2.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a Marylander I resent the invasion of Maryland for electoral purposes of Washington newspaper correspondents.

I could reconcile myself to President Roosevelt going and making speeches in Maryland, for he is after all a responsible public official and, above all, the head of the Democratic Party which is holding a primary election. But these newspaper correspondents, who overrate their ability and their influence, have absolutely nothing to do with the elections in Maryland.

Many of these newspaper correspondents believe that they are taken overseriously by the readers. They are under the delusion that by merely writing columns every day giving their own opinions they become, thereby, directors of public policies.

These men don't make any deep research on public questions and problems. They get mimeographed statements from various sources, talk with some superficially and then they go to their typewriters and explain the whole thing and then give the solution to problems that they hardly understand. Perish the thought! That would be government by glorified ignorance.

It seems about time that a halt is called to the propaganda campaigns of columnists and correspondents in favor of giving readers facts and information. H. R. SMITHERS.

Threnody.

I AM MOURNING for the Major today. His demise a few hours ago was sudden and unexpected. Though he was getting on in years, somehow I had come to class him with the brook and other substantial things that go on and on forever. The Major was so much a part of my al fresco scene, he filled such a unique spot in my life, that I had grown to look on him as one of the indestructibles, the imperishables.

His like will not be seen soon again, though some young sprout will take his place and fill it capably, too, no doubt. We are none of us irreplaceable.

* * *

I remember well the first time I met the Major. He was limping along—for he was a veteran of many combats—and as I passed I bade him good morning in my most sprightly manner. He ignored me. He did not even look up to glare at me as later he was to do, on occasions, after we had established a more firm footing. He hobbled by, his decorum unpierced by my familiarity.

I had better luck the next time our paths crossed. Indeed, it was he who fired the opening gun, and a most cordial volley it was, too. He stopped, sat down on someone's doorstep in the lone spot of sunshine and said, "Meow!" in a voice that was rusty but oiled with a few drops of ingratiation. Then he lifted one calloused paw and began to lick it reflectively.

This was the beginning of our long acquaintance—I believe the Major would use this word instead of "friendship," for he never allowed me to make inroads on his time or to presume on the brief intervals of intimacy which he tossed me like tidbits.

For the Major was a personage, a fact he allowed no one, human or feline, to forget. Though full of years and battle scars, he ruled our block with a paw that lost none of its cunning as life's trials washed about him.

* * *

The Major was not handsome in the way of groomed and shining house cats. But he had a grandeur about him that was undimmed, however bedraggled the old guardsman became. His uniform was a shabby black and white; his ears were shreds that flickered above his broad brow like a bullet-frayed hat of a Civil War soldier. His eyes were a baleful sulphur, their raw, red rims telling of a roistering life that the Major himself never referred to. One shoulder had been broken in some alley brawl in the distant past, which accounted for the limp. Yet he wielded a pliant tail, as disdainful and lordly as Kipling's famed Lone.

The Major never learned that life could be enjoyed; he never knew what it was to relax or "take it easy," which seems to be the slogan, the watchword of the younger generation. His shoulders bore their heavy burden to the end, his limp apparently shifting the load from side to side, thus making it bearable.

* * *

His rule in the alley was a long reign of undisputed authority, and he patrolled the hedges and the back yards seeking out the young toms and giving them a taste of his claws.

He had an aerie across from my window, where high above the street and well concealed by shrubberies, he could scan the street in both directions. From here he could pounce on all comers, whether habitues, mere strollers-by or newcomers to the block. Whatever they were, the Major had the drop on them and sent them packing.

Last spring a new young tom moved in, a handsome young blade in sleek ebony coat, white socks and a startling white underlip with long, picture-book white whiskers sprouting above.

He was prancing down the alley with an eye out for any young female, very important and full of himself, when the Major leaped from his lookout and fell upon him like an avenging angel. The battle was brief and the end was never in doubt. Pierrot took to agile heels, thereafter venturing by the Major's haunt only after first ascertaining that doughty's presence was elsewhere.

Sometimes the Major would be gracious and accompany me on strolls or accept bits of food I offered. Sometimes of his own accord he would accost me and rasp a greeting, for as I said before, I soon learned the Major was a cauldron in which moods seethed and simmered.

I never felt slighted when he limped by with unseeing eyes, rumbling and grumbling to himself; I was not put out if some days our conversation was more one-sided than usual.

* * *

Now he is gone. His aerie is vacant and the alley bereft of his commanding presence. I can wish him God-speed and peace, knowing the Major doesn't want peace or need my wishes and, wherever he is, will always be able to fend for himself. I can only hope that as he goes limping down some golden alley there will be saucers of cream and salmon set out for him on starry back steps and that there will be an abundance of cocky young tomcats who need a sound cuffing from the Major's good right paw. LAURIE HAVRON.

Cotton Ed Orates

By Westbrook Pegler

Old Issue Revived by Senator.

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—Cotton Ed Smith, who has just received another mandate from the people of South Carolina, has been denounced for waving a bloody shirt in his recent successful campaign and reviving the issue of white supremacy in the South.

He is said to have delivered again an oratorical set-piece of his which is derisively known to his colleagues and the press gallery of the United States Senate as "the speech."

This oration is not so famous as some commentators apparently believe it is, but they go on an assumption that the public far and wide is familiar with it and give only an inkling as to its contents in saying that it deals with the horrors of the reconstruction era in the South and, in particular, with personal affront to a female relative of the Senator in those terrible days.

• • • •

IT IS difficult, however, to see how the issue on which Senator Smith made his campaign can be avoided in future battles within the Democratic Party in the South. For the Roosevelt wing of the party contains a strong element of politically adventurous Northern visionaries and theorists who are determined to apply their beliefs evenly everywhere.

In doing this, these New Dealers must, in consistency, raise the issue which Senator Smith used for reasons of political opportunism. He just beat the opposition to the punch.

The issue cannot be avoided anywhere in the deep South without a serious compromise of professed principle. And, if it be pressed out of respect for consistency and principle, and for the appeasement of the Negro vote in the North, it will provoke a widespread revival of the reminiscences and feeling to which Senator Smith resorted in his fight.

• • • •

LEAST CONSISTENT of those who rebuke Mr. Smith for raising this issue are the Communists and those journalistic fellow-travelers who weep over the tragedy of such a low appeal from the stump, knowing that they have forced the issue by nominating a Negro for the office of Vice President on the Communist ticket.

Anyone with any realism of honesty knows that this was done as a gesture of extreme aggravation and taunt, and was directed at the white population of the Southern States.

It was intended to woo the Negro everywhere, and to enrage the white South, and there was not the slightest notion that the candidacy of the Negro running-mate of Earl Browder should be taken seriously.

For that matter, Browder's own candidacy was not serious, although it was grim.

• • • •

IF, HOWEVER, the Communists and their fellow-travelers be taken literally in this, they should welcome rather than regret the acceptance of their deliberate challenge. In that case, they plainly indicated a readiness not merely to meet, but to force the issue, and the acceptance of the challenge by such as Cotton Ed Smith or anyone else in Southern politics should inspire them to attack, not moan.

Cotton Ed is no great adornment to the Senate, and his victory is a matter of little pride to those who would curb the development of a Government by one man's will.

Yet he would have been entirely acceptable, and would have been acclaimed as a progressive statesman of the South, like Pepper, of Florida, if he had notified the White House in advance of a willingness to vote exactly as directed on all issues.

It takes no Senator to do that, and it needn't cost $20,000 a year in pay, expenses and perquisites of the Senatorial office to hire a dummy to perform the simple "yea" and "nay" duties of a man so committed. A page boy could do the job just as well.

• • • •

HUEY LONG has such a Legislature in Baton Rouge, and would sit in the Governor's office, from which he often ran the Governor out like a menial, and watch the vote of his dummies flash in red and green lights on the electrical scoreboard. The lights, except a few, were all of one color on any given proposition, for the Legislators got orders from Huey.

Some of them, when drunk or getting drunk, or engaged on other business, actually did engage page boys to stand by and push the "yea" and "nay" buttons on their desks in the chamber. And if any member forgot to vote, or his page forgot to vote for him, Huey would roar over the phones to Speaker Ellender, now a progressive New Deal Senator from Louisiana, "Hey, tell that so-and-so to push his button so I can see it on the board."

More Than Half Of States Better Child Labor Acts

More than half the States improved their laws on school attendance and child labor last year, the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor reported yesterday.

Both North and South Carolina adopted acts prohibiting employment of children under 16 years of age, making a total of 10 States with a 16-year minimum age standard. Wisconsin adopted a 40-hour maximum week for minors under 18 and a 24-hour week for those under 16, and placed street traders and caddies within the regulations of the child labor law.

Several States prohibited sale of goods made by child labor, others raised the age limit for compulsory education. Kansas, Kentucky, New Mexico and Nevada ratified the Federal child labor amendment, raising the number of ratifications to 28.

Bewilderment

"Coming from France, which to me seemed a thoroughly logical country, I was confused by the many incomprehensible contradictions of American life. Yet I found to my astonishment that my American friends thought the French were a crazy people. When they asked me why France has more than 20 political parties, I countered: 'Why do you jam Roosevelt, Glass and Hague all into one party, and Hoover, Borah and LaGuardia together in the other?'

"I could not understand why the country with the largest workers population in the world should have no labor party; why centralization should be advocated by liberals and States rights defended by big corporations . . . why aliens should be regarded with contempt by the sons of aliens . . . why the dictatorships of Louisiana and Jersey City should flourish under a democratic Federal Constitution.

"Only gradually did I begin to grasp the deep significance of American inconsistencies which so strike the set, static mind of a European."

Correspondent Finds Life In The Sudeten Danger Zone Gives No Outward Hint Of Fires That Smoulder Underneath.

By Mary N Hawes.

Prague.

AS THIS IS WRITTEN London is uneasy, Prague is pessimistic and the German Sudeten regions seem incredibly quiet. But in a single day this situation may be completely reversed. In those districts whose problems are made the grounds for international tension dangerously bordering on war, there is now little outward evidence of the underlying conflicts and the strain of waiting.

Today in the Sudeten regions and in Prague rumors name September 8 as the fatal day, for Hitler will be pressed to make some fanfare at the Nuremberg celebrations. Others whisper the 14th and so on even into October, but all may pass as peacefully as the 24th of July and the 15th of August.

After motoring along a section of the frontier in a Sudeten area the thought that it might change into a battlefield seems utterly fantastic. Skirting along a mountain stream within an easy stone's throw of Germany, seeing nothing but pine forests, rich green meadows and quiet valleys, one cannot begin to realize that on May 21 both sides of a brook bristled with arms. Even today the pine forests of the Czech side hide intricate, powerful fortifications of which there is no trace. That there is preparedness, although the only visible sign of it is one barbed-wire entanglement and a sentry happily fishing.

The people of the district live as on the slope of a volcano. But, like people on the slope of a volcano, they apparently go about their affairs without anticipating an eruption. Today the town of Reichenberg, where there are more than 5 Germans to every Czech, shows on its surface few of the underground currents. Few white socks (one of the badges of the Henleinists) appear on the streets, whereas last May the Henleinists enjoyed flaunting their colors. Today is outwardly calm; tomorrow the white socks may be crowding the streets, and the words "Hitler is coming" may again be heard.

• • • •

PENETRATE THE PRESENT veil, talk to Henleinists, German Social Democrats and Czechs alike, in a Sudeten region, and the feuds and contradictions will leave you bewildered. The Henleinists will charge the government with discrimination against the Sudetens. The German Social Democrat (the only remaining non-Henlein German party) will tell you of Henleinist terrorism and persecution. The Czech will say, "Before 1933 we lived in peace here; now it is like pre-war days when the Germans spat on the Czechs in the streets."

In the Sudeten regions the German Social Democrats (now comprising only about 13 per cent of the German votes) are worse off than the Czechs. They report, with names and dates, many cases of persecution—candidates beaten before the municipal elections. Social Democrats dismissed from their jobs, turned out of houses by landlords, their children tormented at the German schools where, they say, 90 per cent of the teachers are members of Henlein's SdP (Sudeten German Party). One German member of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom told me, "It is almost impossible for us German women who want peace to live in this section, to go shopping, to send our children to school. The Henleinists have said that any German woman who joined our organization would be expelled, and they campaign for the dismissal of our members from their jobs."

The Henleinists deny such terrorism, saying: "In the party it is forbidden to use any terror or boycott. If some Czechs have been turned out by their landlords it must be remembered the landlord has a right to a free choice of his tenants. The party can achieve its aims without the use of terror." Yet the police, in a suburb of Karlsbad, have just seized bundles of leaflets demanding a boycott of non-Henlein shops, and the Henlein representatives are now planning a protest to the government against its ban on boycott threats and terrorization.

IN CERTAIN CASES the government can act. But as the minister of justice said to me, "We can do nothing against whispering campaigns."

Away from Prague, in some Sudeten regions, one begins to sense the wide diversity of interests to which the Henleinist movement holds out some promise, however imaginary. The aim of the party enthusiast who can argue glibly that democracy and the Fuehrer principle are compatible is very different from that of the honest mayor of a village who only hopes that Henlein will cure the depression. But it is the party which gives direction to every fanatical nationalistic sentiment, which exploits every personal animosity, every individual frustration and every economic difficulty. Its claims against the Prague government are not to be judged by fast but by emotion and appeal.

Picture a German community of Czechoslovakia. In the "good old days" which inevitably seem to have surpassed the present, the Germans dominated completely. They looked down on the small Czech population and often employed them for cheap labor.

Today these Germans live in a Czechoslovak state. Austria, to which they one belonged, is now a part of Greater Germany—a country led by an Austrian imbued with pan-Germanism as only an Austrian could be. By appealing to fanatical nationalism and playing on the poverty of the Sudeten Germans the Henleinists have popularized and advertised their cause at home.

The Henleinists charge the Czechs with hoping to denationalize German areas by moving into Sudeten territory and through the activity of the Narodni Yednota (a private organization started under the Austro-Hungarian Empire as a defense against German denationalization of Czechs). The Czechs deny such accusations, pointing out they have no desire to increase the unemployment among their own Czech population in the region and saying in the words of the Narodni Yednota chairman in Reichenberg: "We have no idea of denationalizing anyone. We are a non-profit organization for social protection, social relief and for the maintenance of a national consciousness among the Czechs."

The Henleinists claim that thousands of Germans have been dismissed from the state services, and that the examinations are so difficult the Germans cannot pass them. Yet after hearing this charge in one town I found in the court of justice 25 out of 36 posts were filled by Germans, and the examination for a junior clerk only consisted of two short letters for dictation in German and Czech, and two pages of copy, nothing more.

There is no doubt that the Germans do not hold government positions in proportion to their numbers, and this Prague is willing to grant them. But there is some question whether they want such poorly paid work as the postoffice and railways could give.

Still when there is serious long-term unemployment any job has an appeal. Today many of the unemployed Henleinists go over into Germany to work on public roads built for strategic purposes. "Frontier walking" is no new thing but it has now taken on a political aspect. Only a member of the SdP could hope to get work across the border today.

IT IS NOT only the general economic depression that has thrown employes out of work and closed the glass and textile factories dotting the mountain valleys. Many of these shut down over ten years ago. Their former export markets had disappeared with competitive factories growing up in the new states of Europe, with all governments erecting tariff barriers, with new fashions replacing the old. Even the abolition of the fez in Turkey was felt in the factory villages of the Sudeten region.

IF PRAGUE could set the weavers and glass blowers again to work, much of the unrest and many of the conflicts on which the Henleinist movement feeds would sink into the ground.

Hitler Must Receive Face-Saving Applause.

New York, Sept. 6.—The tenor of dispatches from Europe in the last hours needs some careful analysis, because all important news from Europe today emanates from government sources and is presented with a view to creating a particular atmosphere and a particular impression.

The international situation is so appallingly dangerous and the positions, especially of Great Britain, so peculiarly complicated that this is inevitable.

Lord Runciman, officially representing Great Britain, is actually dealing with an insoluble problem, for he is dealing with a conflict between two conceptions of the state, society and international relations which are basically incompatible. In the long run these two conceptions will not be able to live on the same planet."

What the western democracies are attempting to do is to live and to survive from day to day and to avoid by any means possible a world conflagration in the belief that time and events are on their side. But this process also involves not giving away such essentials of their own survival that time and events may shift to the other side.

• • • •

I AM writing this column on the basis of very inadequate news, but it seems clear that Czechoslovakia is about to offer its final concessions to the Sudeten Germans and that they go very far indeed.

The impression created in the dispatches is that they represent practically capitaulation to Hitler's demands. It is stressed that they have conceded every single point in Konrad Henlein's eight-point program, declared to be "minimum" by Hitler, except the last point.

The impression is also created that Hitler and Henlein will accept the concessions as a victory. As the news looks at present—and everything one writes must be carefully qualified—we might expect that when he next speaks at Nuremberg Hitler will acclaim the liberation of the German minority, or in some other form claim victory.

• • • •

Now I suspect that this is the impression which the western democracies desire to create, because they are engaged in a very absurd, disheartening and dubious game: the game of saving Hitler's face before his own people.

They are engaged in marshaling applause for the German dictator, because they know that unless he can make concessions under applause, claiming victory and peace as his personal contribution, he may plunge all Europe and probably the rest of the world into a horrible war.

The western democracies know perfectly well that a war would destroy Hitler and Hitler's country, but it also might destroy 20,000,000 human beings and wreck every attempt of the democracies to preserve their own liberties.

In other words, the tactics of Great Britain, France and even Czechoslovakia are to humor the insane in order to prevent him, for the moment at least, from indulging in wholesale murder, while, at the same time, withholding from him the acquisition of too many new weapons with which at some later day he might break loose into an even more ghastly campaign of wholesale murder with greater hopes of success.

• • • •

NOW THE concessions which Czechoslovakia has made—according to the latest news—are indeed very great. But the seven points—all but one—of Henlein's and Hitler's demands are the points which the Czech government has been willing to negotiate about since the very beginning.

The eighth point is the one Hitler wanted most, for that contains the Sudeten German demand to the Reich to set up a Nazi state inside the Czech republic. If that point were gained, Czechoslovakia would be gone.

• • • •

IT MIGHT be recalled that in 1914, when the Austrian government sent its ultimatum to Serbia, there also was only one point which Serbia refused to accept, for that point conceded their national sovereignty, and the historians of the world have agreed that that demand was an impossible one, and have held Austria, and not Serbia, primarily responsible for the World War.

If a war should now occur as a result of the Czechs refusing to destroy their own democracy for the sake of the peace of other democracies—which would be not only quixotic but idiotic—then it will be perfectly clear where the guilt lies.

• • • •

FROM the very beginning the Czechoslovak republic has refused categorically only three things.

It insists that whatever autonomy is granted the German minority shall be within the framework of a federal, democratic constitution.

It has offered the German minority equality, but it has refused it a privileged position inside the republic from which to destroy the republic.

It has refused to abrogate the Franco-Czech-Soviet pact of mutual assistance against aggression, accepting the plan for a wider pact of collective security that would include Russia. Czechoslovakia would, of course, be highly pleased if such a pact would also include Germany.

The abrogation of the existing pact was not included in Henlein's demands and has not been conceded by the Czechs, according to any reports I have.

It was not demanded by Henlein in manifesto because it was obviously preposterous and because if he had won point eight he would have achieved it anyhow, by internal revolution.

But it is Hitler's objective to destroy that pact—and he would deliver Konrad Henlein's head on a charger tomorrow if by that he could achieve his aim.

• • • •

IF THE concessions are, in substance, as they seem to be now, on Tuesday afternoon, then the basic victory is so far with the Czechs, however it may be interpreted this week at Nuremberg. But "so far" must be underlined.

Actually, whatever is achieved can be only a temporary truce. Actually, the situation between Czechoslovakia and Germany is approximately what it was between Austria and Germany on the completion of the first Berchtesgaden agreement between Hitler and Schuschnigg in July, 1936, which also was hailed as peace, was abused openly by the Germans and resulted only a few months later in conquest. The important difference is the difference between the Czechs and the Austrians.

There is no peace except as it is based on the will and the final relinquishment of the intention of one state to destroy another, either by fomenting internal revolution or by conquest.

And there will be no such peace in Europe as long as the Third Reich exists with its present ideology and program.

The diplomatic machinations of the western democracies are only evidence of their faith that it is better that the Nazi ideology should perish of its own diseases—rather than be murdered by outside democracies, and that they are prepared to stretch every nerve to spare the world, including the German people, a catastrophe.

Influence Of Hines Trial On Poetry.

The melancholy days have come,
The saddest of the year—
("Object to that!" . . . "It's overruled!" . . .
"Now just go on from here!")
The leaves are swiftly turning now,
The wild geese southward race—
("I claim that is irrelevant." . . .
"No bearing on this case.").

The ducks are on their southern flight,
They gather in the bay—
("Please testify to what you saw,
Not what you heard him say!")
The goldenrod is everywhere,
And brilliant is the dell—
("I won't allow that at this time." . . .
"Exception!" . . . "Very well!")

On far horizon is a haze,
Bejeweled are the trees—
("See Chipsey versus Quattlebaum." . . .
"Repeat the question, please!")
The bathing beach is empty now,
All seaside life is slow;
What is more beautiful than fall?
("Please answer 'Yes' or 'No!'")

The fishermen are trolling and
On six-pound "blues" we sup—
("You cannot introduce that here
Unless you tie it up!")
There is a crispness in the air
That makes you feel alive—
("Now what did 'Spasm' say to you
That day at half past five?")
An extra blanket now we seek,
The nights are getting cold—
("Just state what you saw Lulu do
And not what you were told!")

The fields are like a cloth of gold,
Each scene is rich and gay—
("Was Abadabba present then?" . . .
"How much did Dixie pay?")
Oh, how I love the autumn days!
They have the magic touch
Of "Bo," of "Jake," of "Rosencrantz,"
Of "Ison" and of "Dutch!"

"Tragical-Comical"

I'VE SAID IT BEFORE, and I say it again: there is a chucklesome, heart-breaking realism about Nina Warner Hooke's stories of Biff and Netta Tamlin which is unique and beautiful; Richard Hughes's "The Innocent Voyage," G. B. Stern's "Rueful Mating," and Arnot Robertson's "Ordinary Families" are the only books which occur to me which deserve to be mentioned in the same breath with them. In "Own Wilderness" (Dutton, $2.50), the series come to a close. "Own Wilderness" can stand by itself, but those who miss "Striplings" and "Close of Play" will do themselves injustice.

Biff is an overgrown, black-haired husky boy of 18 when "Own Wilderness" opens, Netta a thin, queer girl of 17, still wearing her hair in braids. They had grown up allies against an adult world which had no time for them, and their own world had been shattered only in those brief intervals when Biff discovered, to his own and Netta's astonishment, that he did not fit at school, and when Biff had rebelliously set out to conquer the world, leaving Netta deserted and alone. Biff was always dreaming of vast fortunes to be made by a fluke; Netta lived, more awaredly, in the present. "The trouble with Biff was that he never realized anything mattered until it was too late." When things bothered Biff he dismissed them from his mind.

Netta walked in to the Tumbell establishment, with all her scanty possessions in a brown-paper parcel announcing, "I saw your advertisement, and I thought I might as well be a governess as anything else, so I came." Mrs. Tumbell, who had been discouraged by the avid demands of other applicants for fancy salaries such as a pound a week, inquired what Netta's qualifications might be. "I haven't got any," said Netta, with her usual truthfulness. "but then, Muddy didn't either, so I shouldn't think it matters." It turned out that Muddy had been Netta's governess, and Mrs. Tumbell hired her on the spot, flattered at the thought of a governess who had had a governess herself, especially pleased at a girl who did not even ask what her pay would be.

With little Wilfred, whom Netta promptly christened "Peeksie," Netta was an immediate success. Netta did not, to be sure, seem to be teaching him much—it was a shock to his mother when she discovered Peeksie's ignorance that there were any letters beyond ABC—but she kept him quiet and contented, which was a comfort.

Not that Netta concealed her shortcoming as a teacher. There was something frightening about her utter candor. Mrs. Tumbell, and her unmarried sister Ada, sometimes, despite their intense curiosity, simply did not dare ask Netta questions about her past; they were actually afraid of what she might say. She had been so frank in explaining that her brother Biff was legitimate while she was just a bastard. The circumstances, she explained, had never made her unhappy; both she and Biff preferred her father to his.

It was Ada who made trouble. Ada, at 28, was a reluctant virgin. "She would lie awake for hours, thinking thoughts which were not lascivious because they were not sufficiently imaginative or well informed." And her thoughts began to center upon this big, black-haired boy who stormed in and out of the house, and who seemed so unaccountably close to his half-sister. Ada hated their oneness, and soon began to think she disapproved of it. It was her duty to undermine it, and she set about her task with all the shrewdness of a woman who, having worked 12 years in a shop, in constant contact with all types of women, had learned something about human nature.

Comedy and tragedy here mingle inevitably and deliciously, heart-warmingly and heartbreakingly. Perhaps these stories are caviar to the general, a very special taste; but I feel sure that when the Walpoles and Swinnertons and Brett Youngs are forgotten, there will still be people to savor and to love them.

3 U. S. Officials Return Soon to College Duties

One week from today two Federal officials start packing traveling bags for a return to college classrooms, and a third, Farm Credit Administrator Gov. William I. Myers, will be returning to Cornell soon afterward.

Both Dr. Roswell Magill, Undersecretary of the Treasury, and Prof. Adolph A. Berle, Assistant Secretary of State, return on the fifteenth to professorships at Columbia University. The date for Gov. Myers' leave-taking has not been fixed, his office said yesterday. He returns to Cornell as dean of agriculture.

Capitalism's Leadership Unattractive to Masses.

TWO studies relating to the National income arrived on the desk of this correspondent on the same day. The first was an analysis of the distribution of income among income taxpayers from 1863 to 1935 by Rufus S. Tucker, economist for the General Motors Corporation. The second was the National Resources Committee's study of consumer incomes in the United States.

Dr. Tucker's conclusions challenge both the idea that there is a "hereditary plutocracy" in the United States and the idea that the concentration of income in the hands of a small number of very wealthy individuals has been increasing.

The burden of his argument seems to be that the "middle class" has been multiplying more rapidly than the very wealthy class, especially since 1916. Without venturing to analyze Dr. Tucker's statistical methods, let's see what he means by the "middle class."

• • • •

He means persons of "moderate incomes" or, as it sometimes is phrased by others, of "the middle income group." Most of them presumably are white collar workers, professional people, and small tradesmen. He has in mind especially persons with incomes of from $4,000 to $10,000, although insofar as the data were available he also takes accounts of incomes of from $2,000 and $3,000 up to $10,000.

The word "middle" is comforting to practical people. Members of the so-called middle class like to speak of themselves as the backbone of the Nation or to think of themselves as holding the balance of power in this country.

In using "middle" in connection with incomes of from $2,000 or $4,000 up to $10,000, Dr. Tucker is applying the customary label at the customary place. But that this "middle" group is very small numerically is shown by Dr. Tucker's tables.

• • • •

TO FIX more accurately the position and size of the "middle income" or "moderate income" group, turn to the report of the National Resources Committee.

There you find that families and single individuals receiving $4,000 or more income annually made up less than 3 per cent of all families and single individuals in 1935-36.

If you drop down to $3,000 annual income, you take in less than 5 per cent of all families and single individuals.

Drop to $2,000 and you still include less than 14 per cent. With Dr. Tucker's figures, based on income tax returns, these percentages would be even smaller.

The real middle income, as disclosed by the National Resources Committee's study, was $1,070 annually in 1935-36. Half the consumer units—families plus single individuals—had more, and half had less, than that.

Omitting single individuals, the middle income of families of two or more persons was $1,160.

Only one-tenth of all families in the United States received $2,800 or more; and this one-tenth received 36 per cent of the aggregate family income of the Nation.

Only two-tenths received $2,050 or more; and to these two-tenths went more than one-half the aggregate family income.

At the top, 147,000 families with annual incomes of $16,000 or more received as much as 9,261,000 families at the bottom with incomes of less than $820.

• • • •

Since President Roosevelt has given currency to "one-third of a nation," it is worth keeping in mind that this lowest one-third—13,000,000 families and single individuals—received incomes of less than $780 in 1935-36, and averaging only $471.

The middle one-third received incomes from $780 to $1,450 and averaged $1,076. The upper one-third received incomes ranging from $1,450 to over $1,000,000.

If every family or every consumer unit had had exactly the same share of the total national income there would have been only $1,622 for each family or only $1,502 for each consumer unit. Clearly this would not have been the millennium.

• • • •

On the other hand, an increase in the national income would not in itself have resulted in a sound distribution. The study of the distribution of the 1929 income, our peak so far, by the Brookings Institution in "America's Capacity to Consume" showed disparities as great as those revealed by the National Resources Committee.

It found that 71 per cent of all families in the Nation had annual incomes of less than $2,500 each, while 36,000 families at the top of the pyramid received as much as was received by 12,000,000 families with incomes of less than $1,500 per year.

The historic economic justification for the concentration of a large part of the national income in relatively few hands is that capital is thereby provided for investment in new enterprise.

Many economists, including Prof. Harold G. Moulton, of the Brookings Institution, believe that too much of the national income was saved during the 'twenties. But whether one subscribes to that belief or not, it is hard to get away from the fact that for several years the relatively few persons with large and moderate incomes have failed in large measure to perform their economic function; they have not been putting their money to work in new enterprises.

• • • •

FOR THE failure of capital to move into action, many reasons are given. The condition is recognized, and presumably the desire to remedy it is general. The political penalties of a much longer delay may be serious.

The capitalists who hate Roosevelt may believe that if there is a reaction against him it will restore them to political authority.

But, as a group they have done little or nothing for almost a decade to make their leadership attractive to the masses, and even if families of the "middle class" receiving incomes down to $4,000 a year are included, they are few in number.

Facts In Profile

AN INTERESTING corner of the arena wherein proponents of the merit system are striving to make effective the executive orders of June 24 is the niche occupied by Uncle Sam's attorneys. It is one of the best spots, currently, for speculation—and, despite its sentiments in the issue, this column is unwilling to say definitely that the lawyers want civil service status for themselves.

It can be said that the lawyers are heart, soul and brief case in favor of the merit system in principle; but it can't be said, at this writing, that they want themselves precipitated into civil service status. Their reason for this, as we discern it, involves the technicalities—and a lawyer can smell a technicality before a hungry man can smell a hamburger.

Their feeling in the matter boils down to something like this: They consider that most positions occupied by Federal attorneys are specialized to the nth degree. Individual lawyers functioning under the Government most generally handle one phase of legal matter, and, as time goes on, this lawyer become expert in his field and, in consequence, is of tremendous value in a machine where every cog must function expertly.

• • • •

THE LEGAL CHIEFS have the highest confidence in the functioning of each of these individual specialists. They have been selected individually for their individual competence in some particular field and once selected have been trained and drilled to something almost like infallibility.

So they begin to wonder, in the current premises, if the Civil Service Commission could immediately put into effect a process for the selection of attorneys that would meet the requirements of a field so traditionally specialized. They are quick to point out that the situation is not an insupportable or incurable one, for adequate and acceptable lists could be made as time goes on. But they are doubtful that suitable lists could be assembled in a hurry.

THEY THINK that until satisfactory lists are assembled, the service would fare better through the legal chief selecting his own men. The legal chiefs, it is argued, know exactly what are the duties to be performed, what those duties mean in relation to the broad picture of the office's general work—and most often the legal chief knows exactly the bright young man who is competent for the job.

But, it is further submitted, as time goes on, the commission will have a list of such able young men and then the situation may by quick transition take care of itself.

All of the above has come to us strictly through informal, but not necessarily haphazard conversations. The lawyers will formally express themselves very shortly, with the report of a committee authorized to study the whole situation of lawyer and merit system.

Notes

MYSTERIOUS, indeed, are the sequences of life. Consider how on September 1 nine residents of Anne Arundel County, Md., fared out with trusty weapons in search of the elusive mourning dove; and how, in the turn of things, they were pounced upon by agents of the U. S. Biological Survey, charged with sundry violations of the game laws, and of how, from this incident in the secluded and great out-of-doors, patients in Walter Reed General Hospital here ate mourning dove on the same night. The agents donated the 47 doves to the patients . . .

The Civil Service Commission announces examinations as follows: Senior medical technician, $2,000; assistant medical technician, $1,620; medical technician (stethography-electrocardiography . . . whew!), $1,800, for Public Health Service. The top age limit is 53; the closing date is September 26 . . .

Congratulations to Leo Hochstetter upon his ascendancy to the editorship of the Federal Organizer. Incidentally, the Organizer changes its name to the Federal Record, beginning with the next issue . . .

Four Thousand Subscriptions Sold for Series of Six Plays at National; 'Antoinette Marionettes' Here Tomorrow.

By Gerald G. Gross,
Substituting for Nelson B. Bell.

A PROSPEROUS season for the National Theater appears to be in prospect, on the basis of subscriptions which have been received for the series of six plays to be presented by the Theater Guild and the American Theater Society.

Four thousand have been sold, it was announced yesterday, although definite dates have been selected for only two of the six plays. They are "The Sea Gull," with the Lunts (November 7) and "Golden Boy" (November 28.)

"A strong possibility also of having the first play in October, prior to either of the announced plays, is being considered in New York, with interesting rumors regarding the Theater Guild's new production of 'Dame Nature' as the opening event," says word reaching this desk. "The Theater Guild's newly organized 'acting group' may be seen in the new play if and when it comes to this city next month. The cast is already in rehearsal."

Subscribers to the 1938-39 season have been notified that the deadline for payment of dues is September 15. This little chore may be taken care of at the local office at the National, open daily from 12 to 5 p. m.

• • • •

There's a free show Thursday, constituents. Place, the Sylvan Theater in Washington Monument grounds, time is 2 p. m. and 6 p. m. and the attraction is the first marionette show ever "wired for sound." An exploitation stunt of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's for "Marie Antoinette," coming to the Palace Friday, the "marionettes on wheels" will present seven important scenes from the picture, all performers being garbed in costumes of the period. The actual voices of Norma Shearer, Tyrone Power, John Barrymore and other principals will be heard as the puppeteers put them through their paces. There will be no charge whatever and one may come any time between 2 and 4, 6 and 8 p. m. to take in the novel show.

Sic transit gloria, or something.

Jim Thorpe and Paul Berlenbach, whose names are spoken with something akin to reverence by veteran sports writers, are members of the "wrecking crew" in "Racket Busters," the headline-inspired picture which succeeds "Four's a Crowd" at the Earle on Friday.

That is to say, these one-time athletic greats, Jim as an all 'round star and Paul as boxing champion, are included among a gang of extras who bust up trucks and ruin commission house products in the course of the film.

You'll have to look very carefully, indeed, if you wish to spot them in the riot scenes—and then you will probably have no luck. I saw "Racket Busters" a few weeks ago in St. Petersburg, Fla., and, attentive though I was, I failed to catch sight of either the Carlisle hero or the redoubtable Berlenbach.

• • • •

Sidney Lust announces a new series of amateur shows at his theaters in nearby Maryland, the first scheduled for 8 p. m., Friday, at the Boro in Bethesda. Juvenile performers will be featured, winners being put on the radio. On successive Fridays there will be "amateur nights" at the Marlboro, Upper Marlboro; Milo, Rockville; Cameo, Mount Rainier, and Arcade, Hyattsville. Youngsters who have talent, or think they have, are advised to get in touch with the managers of those theaters.

• • • •

Announcements are as thick today as kids in the wake of a fire engine. Here's one now from the Gayety Theater, which says it is bringing burlesque back to town a week from next Sunday.

The Ninth street house has been redecorated, altered and refurbished, we are informed, and first quality shows are faithfully pledged. On opening day, September 18, there will be performances at 2:30 and 8:30 p. m. A morning performance will be given on week days, beginning at 11 a. m.

All seats will be reserved and reservations are being taken for opening day and subsequent shows. They may be made at the box office or by calling District 9324.

Jiffygrams: Jean Arthur's fan mail has doubled since the release of "You Can't Take It With You" . . . "Hold That Co-Ed" will be screened tomorrow, instead of today . . . delay in obtaining a print of the comedy is the cause . . . Chester Morris positively will do a bit of prestidigitating at the Earle Friday and for a week thereafter . . . for which don't be surprised . . . before he went into movies he was billed in vaudeville as "Mysterious Morrise—Magician" . . . Leonard Schloss, manager, wants it understood that Glen Echo Park did not close on Labor Day, contrary to alleged reports, but will remain open through this Sunday . . . Loew's Ray Bell calls "Red" Skelton, due at the Capitol Friday, the inventor and designer of the air-conditioned doughnut . . . there's a rumor about town that Skelton, absentminded chap that he is, was saved from a precarious predicament on a recent boat cruise . . . he was hanging over the side, trying to dip a life preserver in the ocean.

WEALTH: Margaret Halsey, author of "With Malice Toward Some," is vacationing in Vermont, and was notified that her book had been accepted by the Book-of-the-Month Club. . . . "But, dear," her professor-husband reminded, "you forgot to ask how much money you'll get for it." . . . The excited author then telephoned her publisher and discussed the deal. "It's all so wonderful," she told her husband. . . . "But how much money did they say you'll get?" he persisted. . . . "I couldn't quite understand," Mrs. Halsey replied, "but it had the word thousand' in it."

This May Give You an Idea

MARJORIE WEAVER, GEORGE MURPHY, JOHN BARRYMORE in one of the more serious scenes in "Hold That Coed," a campus comedy whose world premiere will be held at Loew's Capitol on Friday. What would Ethel say if she could see Frere John now?

Bonita Particular On Choice of Beau

Bonita Granville wants to select her own boy-friends.

When the new "Nancy Drew" series was planned, 15-year-old Bonita was cast as the feminine lead. But no one asked her whether she wanted Jackie Cooper, Bobby Jordan or Billy Halop to play opposite her.

"I think they should have consulted me," Bonita says. "Whoever it is, he'll be my first film sweetheart. And I'd like to have my own choice of a screen boy friend the way I have in real life."

Basketball Arrives.

Basketball as a background for a movie story comes to the screen for the first time in Paramount's "Campus Confessions." The picture features Hank Luisetti and his three-time champion Stanford teammates along with Eleanore Whitney and Betty Grable.

'Samson, Ladies' For Big-Town Girls

"Samson and the Ladies," an original story by Hilda Stone and Betty Reinhardt, has been purchased by Twentieth Century-Fox and will be the third vehicle of the Big Town Girls series.

June Lang and Lynn Bari will begin the second feature of the series, an untitled story with a Reno setting, on August 22, with Joseph Santley directing the Howard J. Green as associate producer. Marguerite Roberts and John Grey are writing the screen play.

Silent Star Cast.

Jules Raucourt, leading man for many feminine stars of the silent screen, including Marguerite Clark, Pauline Frederick and Mae Murray, today was cast in "Artists and Models Abroad," Jack Benny-Joan Bennett starring picture at Paramount.

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., Sept. 6.—While every studio in town was wasting time trying to get Doug Corrigan to come out and act in his own picture David Selznick was working overtime, but quietly, with Director Howard Hawks, doing the story of Amelia Earhart's life which will star Katharine Hepburn. Amazing how much Katharine looks like Amelia. This should be the answer to those exhibitors who were so tough on Katie.

HEDDA HOPPER

Now that Fred Stone has been allowed to check his acrobatics and has made such a hit in "Lightnin'," why won't our producers give Joe E. Brown a chance? He'd be great in "Laugh, Clown, Laugh" or "He Who Gets Slapped." Out of all the stars who did "Midsummer Night's Dream" it was Brown you remembered.

Like most New York actors, John Garfield has a phobia about going Hollywood. He paid $35 more a month for a home in Beverly Hills than he would have for one in Coldwater Canyon with a swimming pool.

Speaking of swimming pools, one of our merchants ordered special machinery at a cost of $10,000 to make the water in his pool freezing cool. Before ordering it he had a fleet of ice wagons dump hundreds of cakes of ice into the pool to see how cold he could stand it. Never heard of a movie star doing that, did you?

Paul Muni, Hal Wallis, Henry Blanke, William Dieterle enjoyed themselves immensely in Mexico City. But the poor writer, Aben Finkle, who should have gone down for local color, was left home with his imagination, chewing his own pencils.

That shark certainly left his trademark on Warren William's finger. And Warren will tell you that his teeth sounded like a buzz saw. Even that bite won't keep him from trying his luck again. He received a souvenir, packed in dry ice—another shark from Florida. His wife added insult to injury by saying: "Not even a hero to the fish, and only a husband to me."

Now that Barbara Stanwyck is off on a trip with her hairdresser, Bob Taylor has mysteriously disappeared, too. Wouldn't we like to know where.

Freddie Bartholomew has grown an inch taller since they started "Listen, Darling." If Mary Astor doesn't come back soon, they'll have to recast parts and let him play the love interest.

Elizabeth Patterson is sad that she can't hold anybody, or any studio, responsible for her knee slip when fans pushed her off sidewalk. And she has no insurance. Her knee went out first when a studio lamp fell on her while playing with Wally Beery in "Old Hutch." Her real grief, however, is that for the first time she was going to wear beautiful clothes in "Bulldog Drummond." Now she won't won't be able to do the picture.

When Margaret Seddons finished reading the part for Tallulah Bankhead in "I Am Different," Talu threw her arms round her and said: "Darling, you're perfect, and wear just what you've got on now!"

Incidentally, opening night almost didn't open. The thief who stole Talu's gold vanity case also took a miniature of her mother which was on her dressing room table always. She won't go on the stage without it. While she was going mad, her husband opened some letters. Among them one from an old friend in Louisiana, from which fell a photograph of her mother—and saved the night.

Even cameras feel the heat. The other day Harold Young, directing "The Storm," at Universal, discovered his had been shooting backwards for two important sequences.

Looks serious between Genevieve Tobin and Bill Keighley, but I have a hunch when the cards are reshuffled Everett Crosby will be back on the job.

Those boys from Connecticut who have stopped traffic while getting 150 of our stars to write their names on that old car in white paint, turned down $1,000 for it offered them by a tourist at Slapsie Maxie's.

The best line of showmanship I've heard for a long time came from a dirty faced newsboy on Hollywood boulevard, yelling: "Shirley Temple's just had quintuplets!" Paper sold like hotcakes. He was right. A set of quintuplet doll babies had just been sent her. That's salesmanship.

Sky Laurels.

Robert Cummings, currently featured with John Howard and Mary Carlisle in Paramount's "Touchdown Army," today is the only non-commercial pilot licensed to teach flying in this country, according to United States Department of Commerce records.

Barrymore Croons.

John Barrymore turns crooner, for the first time in his career, in a scene of Paramount's Alaskan Salmon saga, "Spawn of the North," in which he's featured with George Raft, Henry Fonda and Dorothy Lamour.

Ohio Governor Defies U. S. to Halt Pensions

Pension

to urge "10 or 15 of your relatives and friends to vote for me."

Names and addresses of those getting pension increases and those applying for assistance were routed through the Governor's office, from which personal letters went to recipients and applicants.

Charges Held Admitted.

Arthur J Altmeyer, chairman of the board, saying that failure of Ohio officials to appear for the hearing was "an admission of the truth of the charges," announced after the hearing that a transcript of testimony would be sent to the State officers involved. They would be given "a reasonable time" to reply, if they desire to do so, before the board announced its decision, he said.

Indicating determination to act drastically unless the Ohio system is brought into line with board standards and rules, Altmeyer said he hoped failure of State officials to appear "does not indicate that these officials will take no steps to correct the situation in order that the old people of Ohio may not suffer for the past acts of Ohio's officials."

The Davey "dare" recalled that the board had cut off the Federal 5% per cent contribution to Oklahoma when it was revealed that payments had been made to many ineligible persons and records were not kept in an adequate manner.

Use of WPA Attacked.

The Governor's letter included an attack on "flagrant use of WPA for political purposes" and "increasing and alarming centralization of power in Federal agencies, by the arbitrary and dictatorial use of vast sums of money drawn from every State in the Union." He termed the latter "the most dangerous trend of these times."

"What would you say about the open and flagrant use of WPA for political purposes?" he asked. "This has taken place in many States. In the last Ohio primary the whole WPA machinery was used against us without blushing.

"I do not complain of the result because that is part of the luck of politics. But I do complain when we are charged with a minor offense, while these great Federal agencies are used with reckless unconcern to make and unmake men in current public life. If the hands of the Federal agencies were clean any one of them might make charges with better grace."

He said that for two and a half years the Ohio pension system had been under control of the Social Security Board, but the board's charges against him and the set-up were not made until three days before the recent primary, in which he was defeated for the Democratic renomination by Charles Sawyer. He charged the accusations "were intended to scare 110,000 helpless old people in Ohio into voting against myself on the threat of taking away from them half of their old age pensions."

"This," his letter added, "was surprisingly dirty politics for one who pretends to be as righteous as yourself. If all the facts about your political manipulations and violation of civil service and other tricky activities could be brought out before the public, I fear that you would not look so good and clean as you pretend."

Denies All Charges.

Davey "denied categorically" the board's charges, though saying they were so general that "there is no basis upon which answers can be made."

He said he had witten pensioners asking for their support "on the basis of the many things I have tried to do for them," but said his opponent had done the same thing.

"Ohio is still a sovereign State," he said in explaining his order for State officials not to attend the board hearing.

Frank Bane, executive director of the board, summarizing testimony at the hearing, charged that "inefficiencies" in the Ohio organization resulted chiefly from the fact that the pension administration "is and has been permeated from top to bottom with partisan politics."

Wants State Reorganization.

Insisting that the board does not desire to deprive the Ohio needy aged of Federal funds, he declared a proper agency could be set up in Ohio by reorganization of the State division and observance of the State civil service laws.

Those who testified included Robert P. Bingham, of the board's legal staff; George N. Shaw, of the bureau of accounts and audits; Miss Sue S. White, assistant to the general counsel; Miss Jane Hoey, director of the bureau of public assistance, and Miss Rose J. McHugh, of that bureau, and Albert H. Aranson, who conducted the personnel study.

It was testified that Gov. Davey had ordered a $10 increase in all pensions and notice of that action was given to all recipients. Then, it was said, a campaign letter from the Governor was sent to those receiving the increase. In last December another 10 per cent boost was ordered and this year, before the recent primaries, Henry J. Berrodin, chief of the Division of Aid to the Aged, sent all pensioners a campaign letter extolling Davey as responsible for the improvement in the pension payments.

United States Aid $36,648,162.

Other testimony was that members of the division staff were required to get subscriptions to the Ohioan, a publication favorable to Davey's candidacy.

"Somehow get the vote for Davey" was declared to have been one instruction.

Old people were said to have been approached by staff workers with such statements as:

"You want to vote for Gov. Davey, the man who gave your your pension, don't you?" and "If you don't vote for Gov. Davey you may lose your pension."

Board officials said that if the State cannot justify the $2,000,000 to $2,500,000 expenditures to which the board has taken exception the State will be held reesponsible for that amount.

To date, from February, 1936, through September 2, of this year, Federal contributions to the Ohio payments have totaled $36,648,162. For the current quarter ending September 30, the Federal grant was $4,416,198. The average monthly payment in Ohio is $23.03.

Cashier Places Hines on Schultz Pay Roll; Trial Halts for Eulogies to Cardinal Hayes

Hines

"northwest corner of Sixth avenue and Ninth street."

Schoenhaus said he knew Hines well. He was first informed by George Weinberg, Schultz lieutenant, in the spring of 1932, that Hines was to go on the gang's payroll at $500 a week. He was ordered to apportion that $500 equally on the expense sheets of the four policy banks run by "Big Joe" Ison, or "Spasm," Alexander Pompez, the Maloney brothers, Eddie and Elmer, and himself. He was keeping a ledger and work sheets on the operations of all the "combination" of policy bankers, for Schultz, he said, putting the "combination's" money in a safe deposit box and drawing it out to pay people as ordered.

He said payments to Hines began in April, 1932, and continued well into 1936—eight or nine months after Schultz was slain in Newark, N. J., in October, 1935.

Met Hines at Club.

He first met Hines, he said, in the autumn of 1932, at the Monongahela Democratic Club, where Weinberg introduced him, and told Hines that he, Schoenhaus, would get in touch with him when Weinberg was unavailable. Three months later, he testified, "George sent me down to pay him $500," and placed the payment as at Hines' home. Later he was told to "bring the old man's money down" to the home of Dixie Davis' mother. Arriving there, he said, he found Davis with Leon Rosenthal, a Hines henchman otherwise known as "Leo, the Bum."

Davis asked him, he said, to drive Leo to Hines' home, and he complied. There he handed Hines $500 in a roll of bills, he testified, and the Tammany leader stripped off a couple and handed them to Leo. He was asked by Leo whether he would drive "the old man" down to the Aqueduct Race Track, and agreed to do it. He said he saw Hines at the track after every race, and his testimony at this point was illumined by a rare smile of recolection.

"He gave me five winners out of six," he testified.

It Stays on Record.

Stryker sought vainly to have that stricken from the record. Sol Greb, assistant of Dewey, who was examining the witness, succeeded in having it recorded as "descriptive of the relationship" between Schoenhaus and Hines.

He remembered the election of District Attorney Dodge in 1933, he testified, as George Weinberg instructed him during that campaign to keep a separate record of payments made to Hines for Dodge's election. Later, he said, "Lulu" Rosenkrantz, Schultz's bodyguard, came around and asked for that record to take to "the Dutchman," who wanted to examine it. Payments totaling $30,000, he said, were made on a dozen occasions.

He was at home, he said, the morning of election day, 1933, when "Dixie" Davis phoned him and told him to wrap up two packages of money—one of "small bills" and one of larger ones. He wrapped up $1,500, he said, in "small bills," which he described as "fives, tens and twenties," and carried $1,000 in "hundreds." He remembered giving "Dixie" $500 from the roll of small bills, and saw "Dixie" hand the money to the Tammany leader. A little while later, he said, Hines came back to them, and the scene was repeated twice for a total of $1,500.

Payments of $500 a week rose to $1,000 sometimes, and frequently to $750 in 1933 and 1934, but in the middle of 1935, he testified, George Weinberg told him to cut them down to $250 a week. After "the Dutchman" died, he said, payments of $1,000 every month or so, for eight or nine months, were made through George Weinberg or "Dixie" Davis. The last one he remembered, he said, was in November, 1936.

Gelb drew from him figures as to the policy business. "Big Joe" Ison's bank was grossing about $11,000 a day, he said; Alexander Pompez's another $11,000; the Maloney brothers, $12,000; Henry Miro's (which he was running), $6,000; Marcial Flores,' $3,000, and Wilfred Brunder's about $2,000, or a total of $45,000 daily.

He recalled two payments of $500 each to Hines at Sixth avenue and Ninth street, and when Gelb turned him over to the defense for cross-examination, Justice Pecora intervened to ask him how many times he said he paid Hines in 1933 and 1934.

Can't Recall Alias.

In cross-examining, Stryker gleaned from the witness that he lived under an assumed name, "Harry Stone," and another alias he could not remember.

He had been a fugitive from justice in Newark, he said, for four months, when George Weinberg, then in the custody of Dewey's detectives, phoned him, May 11, and said he was considering turning State's evidence. Weinberg told him, he said, that his testimony was bound to implicate him. He came into the district attorney's office and surrendered May 12.

Stryker was derisive of the witness's sudden interest in helping the State, and suspicious of his association with George Weinberg and "Dixie" Davis.

Several times, when Stryker was questioning him about whether he had not talked with Weinberg about the story they would tell in court at Hines' expense, the witness interjected, "the police were there," and he denied stoutly ever discussing the case with either Weinberg or Davis.

Budget Chief Bell To Start Hearings On Funds Sept. 16

By the Associated Press.

Daniel W. Bell, budget director and the Administration's professional "no man," hauled out his kit of negatives yesterday for their annual fall workout.

Then he asked all Government departments to xplain at hearings beginning September 16 thir appropriation erquests for next year.

The Federal fiscal year doesn't begin until next July, but this is the season when all Government agencies fill their hope chests with appropriation requests. The rude awakening — for appropriations almost never are so large as the requests—comes in lat September when Bell begins to say his "noes."

8 Congressmen Ask To See Navy Bases

By the Associated Press.

Chairman Vinson (Democrat), Georgia, of the House Naval Committee askedthe Navy Department yesterday to take eight Congressmen on a ten-day inspection trip of West Coast Naval bases and defenses, starting September 15.

The tour, to be made by airplane, was designed to give the members of the Naval Committee and of a Naval Appropriation Sub-committee firsthand information that might be used as the basis for legislation to strengthe or expand Pacific Coast defenses.

Who's Afraid of October 3, 1927?

Nobody, of course. Can't even remember that day, can we? So, we must have mastered its problems in our stride—and life went smoothly on.

Yet, there was a time when some people feared October 3, 1927, because some people always fear the future.

Now—Today is here. What a thing of promise to Americans is each new day! Opportunities beyond the dreams of our forefathers. Comforts and conveniences beyond the reach of peoples of other nations. Each day providing well-earned moments of leisure to plan our personal contributions to America's tomorrow.

The Washington Post's Special Educational Section

If selecting a school for yourself or for your children is still a problem, be sure to read the Special Education Section in this Sunday's Post. It will contain the largest selection of school advertising that The Post has carried this year. Each year since 1934 The Post has carried a larger volume of school advertising (display) than any other Washington newspaper. This leadership is your assurance of getting a much wider variety of school advertising from which to make your selection. Consult the Special Educational Section in Sunday's Post.

1 Nuremberg, Germany. Preluding the Nazi Party congress, storm troopers goose-step past a new military barracks at Nuremberg. Rudolf Hess, a deputy party leader, may be seen reviewing the troops with Admiral Horthy, regent of Hungary.

2 Valdahon, France. Soldiers of the French Republic around a dispatch rider on a muddy road near here are just a few of the 20,000 troops engaged in maneuvers in that section. The war ministry recently announced that "certain reserves" had been called to the colors as a "precautionary measure."

3 With tension still unrelaxed, France and Germany were strengthening border defenses along the Maginot and Siegfried lines. French machine-gunners shown above have been crawling through barb-wire entanglements during the maneuvers.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Elderly Woman of Impressive Mien Resents Being Called 'Dearie' by Saleswomen; Prefers 'Madame.'

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I do not ask advice for myself, so much as I wish you to give some to the other party—the other party to my dilemma, which is this: I went out the other day to buy a non-electric waffle iron and an earthenware crock into which to put preserves. More than one saleswoman who no longer handles non-electric waffle irons, and who never heard of crocks for preserves, called me "dearie" and patted me on the shoulder by way of consolation (I suppose) in so informing me. You will be relieved to know that eventually I found one non-electric waffle iron. (I assure you they were selling stuffed dodos on the next counter.) But as for the crocks, they have gone forever, along with the ichthyosaurs.

• • • •

Now, I am nobody's "dearie." One glance at me should convey that fact unmistakably. Neither am I of a constitution to be submerged by a tidal wave of modern gadgets when my heart is set on so respectable a device as a non-electric waffle iron. I have a face, a constitution and a disposition that should indicate that the only term of address applicable to me (to be safely employed in my presence, that is) is that of madame. "Ma'am" was good enough for Queen Victoria. Madame is entirely satisfactory to me.

• • • •

When, instead, the saleswoman employs "dearie" and lays hands on me, what am I to do? Since either I do not possess the requisite dignity for involuntarily compelling this address, or the saleswoman is impervious to nuances of deportment, am I to protect myself and astonish her by voicing my resentment with vigor? Or am I to ignore her impertinence, excusing it on the ground of utter lack of manners? Can you not advise store managers to acquaint employes with the inadvisability of permitting their attitude and language to pass the line of friendly service? There may be some customers who like patronizing familiarity; but certainly there are others who feel that it not only encroaches on their self-respect but that it definitely detracts from the saleswoman's dignity as well.

DIGNITY.

The Retort Courteous.

DEAR ANTIQUATED: Surely a woman who owns so delicious a sense of humor as that which sparkles irrepressibly through your letter can't really resent unintentional impertinences to the degree that you profess to. I cannot believe that you are half so formidable in appearance and demeanor as you suppose. I daresay there is a jollity of mind and spirit underlying, and gleaming through, your dignified "front" to tradespeople which causes them to warm to you on sight; and that in addressing you as "dearie," these saleswomen are reacting spontaneously to a lovable personality, with no thought of patronizing or presuming.

• • • •

For my part, while I grimace inwardly on being addressed as "dearie" or "honey" by effusive saleswomen, I still prefer their brand of attention to that of the haughtily condescending grand duchess type of salesperson who chills you with her aloof and fastidiously reluctant species of service—who fixes you with a fishy eye when your presence and your importuning can no longer be ignored, and with icy impersonality and ill-concealed boredom and contempt languidly deploys her wares for your annoying inspection.

• • • •

However, I am happy to report that this (to me) highly intimidating variety of saleswoman seems to be fast disappearing from the market place. There was a time when it seemed to be my painful misfortune to encounter her wherever I went; but I scarcely ever see her any more. Perhaps she has been translated into a friendlier democrat by this new and revolutionary merger of the Toiling Masses and so-called Upper Classes, of which we hear and read so much nowadays.

• • • •

I, personally, have no forthright protective strategy for dealing with saleswomen who employ terms of endearment when addressing a prospective customer. After thinking the matter over carefully, I am forced to the conclusion that my individual reaction is probably one of brave sufferance (see Webster's definition of sufferance: "patient endurance, negative consent by not forbidding or hindering, toleration . . ."). I further believe, after analyzing my hitherto unexplored thoughts on the matter, that to adopt any other form of reaction to such witless presumption is to be guilty of an equal degree, though different variety, of incivility.

• • • •

In short, and in my opinion, you have already hypothesized the only tenable customer reaction to the innocent and innocuous affront—namely and to wit: "Ignore the impertinence, excusing it on the ground of utter lack of manners." It is not within my province to conduct a School of Instruction In Acceptable Manners for the benefit of either store managers or store employes.

To Banish Tea Stains.

Tea stain removers: 1 Rub the stained area with glycerine and then wash it out in warm water and soap suds; (2) stretch the stained section across a bowl and pour a kettle of boiling water—held 2 feet or so above—over it; (3) sprinkle with salt and lemon juice and let garment lie in the hot sun until the stain has disappeared.

A Topcoat for Coming or Going

FOR THOSE WHO TAKE ON a nondescript, gunnysack look in the usual shapeless topcoat, the type of coat shown above is the answer. This California-made travel coat is of brown wool flecked with red, green and beige, and is cut on very flaring lines. The back yoke and bell sleeves are cut in one and a deep-action pleat runs from yoke to hem while additional flare is given by pleats nipped in at the waist and held by the broad brown suede belt.

Stripes, Checks Add Variety to Fall Topcoats

Reversibles Are the Newest Development for This Season.

NO WARDROBE is complete without a topcoat. It is the answer to the perplexing problem of what to wear on those cool fall days when it is too early to don winter wrappings. And if you travel at home or abroad, you will find the topcoat indispensable for meeting changeable weather.

Gay plaids, colorfully flecked tweeds, diagonal stripes and bright checks give variety to the new fall topcoats that feature unfurred reefers, fitted, unfitted and boxy types. Cut along new lines, the camel's hair coat is still a popular stand-by.

Smart New Details.

Sturdy tweeds that harmonize with several colors are made with dolman sleeves, bloused backs and double-breasted effects as well in the old fitted mannish type. Double-breasted types are becoming more prevalent in reefers. Reversibles with more attention to cuff, pocket and collar details are newest developments in topcoats. Tweeds come in both plaids and checks. Plum-colored imported tweed having a light blue crossed bar is used in one of the new versions. A plaid woolen combines three colors—reddish brown, gray and rich blue. Another topcoat is made of imported woolen with diagonal stripes in soft shades of green, blue and orange.

Fall Makes Clean Walls Important

Walls should be one of the first considerations of the housewife who intends to do a thorough job of renovation for the fall. Once the slip covers are off and the window drapes back in place, soiled spots and finger marks will show up twice as clearly, and it will take twice the effort to go after them.

If the walls are covered with non-washable paper, superficial dust can be removed with a wall brush or a broom covered with a clean muslin cloth. Spots will often yield to a soft eraser or to gentle swabbing with a patent cleaning preparation.

A far more satisfactory cleaning job can be done on walls that are painted or covered with one of the many kinds of paper or fabric that respond so beautifully to washing or even to scrubbing with lukewarm water and soap.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Sept. 6.

SARATOGA, our combination spa and racing plant, was in a very large dither during its last week. In the first place, open gambling was permitted but one night—which was one more than the law of New York State allows. The faro dealers and roulette swirlers screamed with pain; but they were shut up tight. Second, racing was at its best. Third, the beautiful bathing plant was completed, and there is none better.

ALICE HUGHES.

Add these up—plus the fact that society filled the beautiful racing park as never before—and we have appalling rumors. Owing to the fact that the slit-eyed gamboleers did not function as per schedule, the astonishing story is now current that the great August racing month will be moved from the lovely little old up-State city to Belmont Park, the exciting oval on Long Island.

• • • •

Now I yield to no one in my admiration for Belmont, named for the late August Belmont, father of big-time horse racing in these parts. On the other hand, there is only one Saratoga, with its beautiful elm-shaded streets, its classic hotel, its boxes filled with the loveliest and smartest of ladies, its unique traditions. There is no place like it in our country.

• • • •

And to think that there is a chance that this glorious place will be deserted during the month of August just because the burglars of New York City—law breakers all—are not permitted to ply their trade for a month. Well, the thought is unbearable. Anyone who has ever visited Saratoga loves it. And if this August switch is made, there is no justice—as though there were!

• • • •

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—As you may have heard, there will be a world's fair here next year. There will be hot dogs for most of us, but we must take care of the fancy lot. There is the Terrace Club, for instance, of which I have told you—an elegant joint, five grand to belong, and gosh knows the restaurant and bar bills. Now one of lush lads named Felix Ferry has thought up something called "The Arabian Nights" for the show. It will cover 2 acres, 26,000 square feet, and, as far as I can learn, champagne will flow in creeks—at quite a bit a flow. All this will center about a casino—and you and I, munching our hamburgers, will be lucky to get a look at the joint. Or who cares? Is that what makes a fair?

• • • •

Have you seen a new picture of young Gloria Vanderbilt—now in her 'teens? She is a very tall girl, and very pretty, and bids fair to be as lovely as her beautiful mother, the senior Gloria, of lawsuit unhappiness. Heaven grant she isn't spoiled by all this litigation! . . . One of our greatest clowns is Jack White, who goes mad nightly at the "18 Club" on West Fifty-second street. The other night Norma Shearer, bangs and all, came in, and White, who never misses, hollered, "Let her eat cake!" So a huge cake was brought to La Shearer, who ate a bit. . . .

• • • •

We folks are delighted to hear that Tallulah Bankhead, plus Husband John "Barrymore" Emery, is a huge hit out West in her new play, "I Am Different." . . .

• • • •

Our favorite heroines are phone operators in hotels. The other night Charlotte Gill stayed at the board of the Wyndham while flames raged and told the 400 guests about it before she left. Then she called the firemen. You'd be surprised how often such things happen here—and no medals, either!

• • • •

Add list of local career women. Mrs. John S. Ogilvie, jr., who is way up in the blue book, has just snatched a job peddling hats in the smartest Fifth avenue store. Well, good luck, kid. Many of us started when we were barely out of school.

Colors of Spring To Lend Spirit to Winter's Styles

Paris (U.P.).—Spring-like colors will lend a gay spirit to winter styles if the world follows the trail blazed by Paris dressmakers.

"Candy" colors — peppermint greens, taffy pinks and more somber horehound shades mix with each other and with black so freely that none need fear a dreary winter as far as clothes are concerned.

The Oriental influence is probably largely responsible, for eastern embroideries and fabrics, whether they be Persian, Chinese or Japanese, are usually rich and brilliant in color. Look at Schiaparelli's lavender velvet jacket designed for winter wear. It has salmon and bright green silk embroidery mingling with metallic threads. It's worn with straight, masculine-cut black wool trousers.

Begin Your Dream Garden

THE CHARMING garden you dream of having—start now to make it come true!

Plant the gorgeous peony in September if you'd enjoy a riot of luscious pinks, reds and white next June.

If your old peony plants did not bear well, start new ones by dividing the old roots as our diagram shows.

Dig up the entire plant, shake the root mass until it falls apart or cut off the divisions or rootstocks with a spade. Each rootstock that has three to five thick buds will bloom radiantly for you. Plant about 3 feet apart, cover the buds with from 1 to 2 inches of soil.

This is the season, too, to divide the lovely glowing day lily—to plant or separate tulip bulbs.

New tulip bulbs of "blooming size" will flower brightly their first season. Cover each bulb with three times its thickness of soil.

Day lilies you divide easily by taking squares out of your patch checkerboard fashion. Plant these new clumps wherever you have space—for day lilies are as good-natured as they're beautiful.

Other garden adventures you'll want to start now include a rock garden. Winter settles and weathers your rocks—gives bulbs a start.

Gardening success will easily be yours—if you follow our 40-page booklet, Gardening Made Easy. Tips on rock gardens, lily pools, rose gardens, gourds, herbs, easy-to-grow flowers. How to avoid pests.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, Gardening Made Easy, to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Mr. Mayers Weds Florida Girl

Groom's Father Officiates At Ceremony in St. Thomas'.

The Rev. William Herbert Mayers, father of the bridegroom, officiated at the marriage Saturday morning at 8 o'clock of Miss Rachael Colmar Norris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lee Norris, of Fort Pierce, Fla., and Herbert William Drayton Mayers of Washington. He was assistedby the Rev. David Campbell Mayers of Middleburg.

The ceremony took place at St. Thomas' Episcopal Church, which was decorated for the occasion with gladioli and delphinium. The bride, who was given in marriage by Albert M. Dickson, a close friend of her family, wore a street length gown in an old rose shade. A corsage of lilies of the valley and accessories of teal blue completed her costume. Her only attendant, Miss Olie Brown of Fort Pierce, Fla., wore a teal blue frock with wine-colored accessories and a corsage of gardenias. Forte Leighton Mayers, brother of the bridegroom, was best man.

Following the ceremony the couple left by motor for North Carolina. After September 12 they will reside at the Cordova Apartments here.

Mrs. Mayers attended Peace College in North Carolina and George Washington University. Mr. Mayers, the son of Mrs. William Herbert Mayers, attended the Taft School and George Washington University. He is with the Pan American Union.

Ruth Ward Is Married To Mr. Lee, of Detroit

Mr. and Mrs. George Bronson Ward announce the marriage of their daughter, Ruth, to Sherman Emery Lee, son of Mr. and Mrs. Emery H. Lee of Detroit, Mich. The ceremony took place Saturday at St. Albans Church.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Lee are graduates of American University. They will reside at Devonshire Courts.

Miss Edna Taft's Book On Haiti Due in October

Miss Edna Taft, a native of Washington and daughter of H. Arthur Taft, at the time of his death assistant superintendent of the Government Printing Office, and a distant cousin of the late William Howard Taft, has recently completed a travel book on Haiti, "A Puritan in Vooddoo-Land," which will be released in October by the Penn Publishing Co.

Although Miss Taft has lived since childhood in Norwalk, Conn., she still has many friends in Washington. She was educated at the College of William and Mary in Virginia, Barnard College, Columbia University and the University of Toulouse, France; and later was instructor in French at a private school in North Carolina, then in Connecticut.

Parents Will Join Rumbolds in D. C. Later This Month

The Third Secretary of the British Embassy and Mrs. Anthony Rumbold will be joined later this month by the former's parents, Sir Horace George Montagu Rumbold and Lady Rumbold.

The Rumbolds for several generations have been prominent in England's diplomatic service. Sir Horace served as Ambassador to Berlin from 1928 to 1933 and at one time was second British plenipotentiary at the Lausanne Conference in 1922. His last official task was as vice chairman of the Royal Commission on Palestine in 1936 and 1937.

Miss Downing Is Guest Of Mr. and Mrs. Dagger

Miss Downing will return to Cleveland the end of the week.

Miss Martha Coad Is Guest of Relatives in Md.

Mr. and Mrs. George Will Adams of 35 Johnson avenue, Hyattsville, Md., have as their guest this week, Miss Martha W. Goad, sister of Mrs. Adams and an instructor in economics at Muscatine Junior College, Muscatine, Iowa. A number of teas and dinners have been given in honor of the visitor, who will leave the end of the week for Muscatine.

Mrs. Adams recently returned from a visit to her father, Dexter Goad, of Hillsville, Va.

Mrs. Stratford Goes West.

Mrs. Herbert Stratford, who has been visiting her mother, Mrs. Nathan Wyeth, at Bar Harbor, has gone to Chicago, where she and Mr. Stratford will reside.

Wife's Parents Hosts To Killmasters and Son

Former Representative and Mrs. Philip Pitt Campbell have as their guests at Windsor, their residence on the Arlington Ridge road, their son-in-law and daughter, Commander Benjamin S. Killmaster, U. S. N., and Mrs. Killmaster, and their 12-year-old son, Duncan Killmaster. Commander Killmaster has for several years been in command of the U. S. S. Canopus, in Asiatic waters, and recently was transferred to Washington. Mrs. Killmaster, the former Miss Dorothy Campbell, and her son spent much of the past two years in Tsinfitao, China.

Commander and Mrs. Killmaster will move next month to the house at 1230 South Arlington Ridge road, which they occupied three years ago when he was on duty in Washington.

Silver Spring Couple Hosts to Georgia Pair

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond K. Peck of Silver Spring, Md., have with them for several weeks Mrs. Peck's sister, Mrs. Elmer C. Becker, and her daughter, Miss Carolyn Ethyl Becker, of Atlanta, Ga. Mrs. Becker and her daughter arrived last week with Mrs. Peck who has been visiting her parents in Atlanta.

Previous to that Mr. and Mrs. Peck were in Nashville, Tenn., for six months. Mr. Peck was sent there on business by the War Department.

Mrs. Thatcher to Leave For Kentucky Wedding

Mrs. M. H. Thatcher has left to visit her sister, Mrs. Sam A. Mason, of Frankfort, Ky., and to attend the wedding tomorrow of the latter's daughter, Miss Prue Mason, to James Darnell of Louisville.

Miss Mason has frequently visited Mrs. Thatcher here and has also been the guest of Mrs. Frank C. Henry of Washington. She and her husband will live in Louisville after their marriage.

Sells Farm For $12,500 Through 6-line Ad in The Post

It doesn't cost much to sell a farm when you reach the right prospects. The Maryland Realty Co., Washington, D. C., ran a six-line advertisement in the classified columns of The Post for two days. The ad cost only $1.56—and brought a customer who bought a 680-acre farm for $12,500. Selling farms is a nice business if you can get the customers. The Maryland Realty Co. finds it easy when they use Post Want Ads.

Fashion Show Will Raise Funds For Jewish Consumptive Relief

Miss Ruth Glasser Is Chairman of Committee for Fete to Open Fall Season September 15 With Music and Parade of Models.

The Washington Junior Auxiliary of the Jewish Consumptive Relief Society of Denver, Colo., will start its fall season with a combined meeting and fashion show at 8:30 p. m., September 15 at the Jewish Community Center.

Miss Ruth Glasser is chairman for the show. While models parade in susumn outfits, music will be furnished by Leon Brusiloff's string ensemble with Miss Ida Gorman as vocalist.

The local organization has pledged support of two patients at the Non-Sectarian Sanitarium, near Denver, and to raise $2,000 will give a donor banquet and dance October 30 at the Raleigh Hotel. Miss Elise Permesly is chairman, with the Misses Selma Weiner and Pearl Teichman as cochairmen.

Also in October a membership tea and bridge will be given under supervision of Miss Rose Jeweler.

Members this summer have sponsored private projects such as dances, weiner roasts and card parties to help raise $2,000. A store to sell rummage articles has been opened.

Within the organization there are three individual groups, the cultural group which sponsors book reviews, speakers and music under chairmanship of Miss Rita Rubinstein, assisted by Miss Eva Klein, cochairman; a dramatic group under chairmanship of Miss Tillie Norwood and a sports group which covers bowling, skating, horseback riding and bicycling, under supervision of Miss Helen Bennett.

The Washington Junior Jewish Consumptive Relief Society meets the second Thursday of each month at the Jewish Community Center. Election of officers for next year will take place at the December meeting. Present officers are Miss Irene Saloman, president; Mrs. Dorothy Ratner Simon, vice president; Miss Rose Prager, treasurer; Miss Hilda Rapport, recording secretary; Miss Naomi Koplin, corresponding secretary; Miss Florence Sachs, financial secretary.

Reddy Fox Is Discreet.

The truly smart avoid defeat
By being always most discreet.
—Old Mother Nature.

As a rule Reddy Fox remembers this, and it is one reason that he is considered one of the smartest, if not the smartest, of all the people in the Green Forest and on the Green Meadows. So it is seldom that Reddy acts with undue haste. Thus he avoids a lot of trouble that he might readily get into were he less discreet. It is just as true of the people who wear fur and feathers as among human folk that the indiscreet are the ones most often in difficulties themselves and who cause much of the trouble for their neighbors.

Reddy is no coward. He isn't afraid to fight when he must or when something worth while is to be gained by fighting. No, Reddy isn't a coward. No, indeed! But he is discreet and he tries to avoid serious trouble unless he considers that what is to be gained is worth the trouble it may cost.

Reddy had been hunting all night, and when the Black Shadows began to retreat toward the Purple Hills he was still a long distance from his home in the Old Pasture. He was making his way along a bank of the Big River some distance below the land of Farmer Brown, where all the little folk who wear fur and feathers are safe from trappers and hunters with terrible guns. So, of course, he had no expectation of seeing any one among his acquaintances whose homes were on Farmer Brown's land.

Back from the Big River over in a piece of meadowland was what is called a slough. It was a small pond, long, rather narrow, shallow, surrounded by marshy land and had once been connected with the river, and even now was in the spring when the water in the Big River was high. Now, however, there was no water connection between the Big River and this pond. Anyone traveling between the two would have to go overland for quite a distance. Reddy stared across toward the slough. He had visited it often. Sometimes he had had good hunting there when he had been unable to catch a meal elsewhere.

Reddy was not quite half-way between the Big River and the slough when he abruptly stopped, raised himself on his hind feet that he might see over the grass better. Someone was ahead of him in the grass, someone of good size. It might be a young Chuck. What could be better than a breakfast of young Chuck? The mere thought of it made his mouth water. Reddy flattened himself in the grass and began to move forward quickly yet keeping low. He stopped, cautiously lifted his head for another look, moved on again. The next time he looked he had a better view.

"It isn't a Chuck; it's a Muskrat;" exclaimed Reddy under his breath. "It isn't often I have a chance to catch a Muskrat on dry land. He must have come from the Big River and is on his way to that little pond. I must get between it and him."

Reddy circled, still keeping as low as possible. When he was between the water and his prey he no longer made a pretense of keeping out of sight. He boldly and openly advanced toward the meal he was sure would now be his. Now that he had a better view, Reddy was surprised.

"That fellow is bigger than I thought for. He is as big as Jerry Muskrat over at the Smiling Pool."

Then he stopped abruptly and stared. "As I live it is Jerry Muskrat!" he exclaimed. What luck! I have tried and tried to catch that fellow, but never could find him far enough from water to give me half a chance. Now I've got my chance and—"

He didn't finish. From behind a clump of grass another had appeared. It was Mrs. Jerry. She moved over beside Jerry. They both saw Reddy now and were rolling back their lips to show those long, strong teeth of theirs. Somehow, Reddy felt less sure of that breakfast. He had been prepared to fight one, but two was a different matter altogether. Reddy sat down right where he was to consider the situation. This was no time to act hastily. He must be discreet.

Hitler Warns Germany Can't Be Blockaded

Hitler

Likewise there was nothing in anything he said which could be taken as referring to the new defense measures announced in France yesterday.

Henlein Joins Hitler.

Much interest was caused by the arrival at Numremberg today of Konrad Henlein, leader of the Sudeten Germans, and Dr. Ernst Eisenlohr, German minister at Prague. Both were understood to be here partly to discuss the new concessions to the Nazi demands which Czechoslovakia made yesterday under British pressure.

The Czech proposal for three Sudeten territorial blocs was understood to be unacceptable to the Nazis, since it failed to provide, as Hitler's program planned, a single autonomous region. Moreover, it was expected that der fuehrer, speaking through his mouthpieces, would hold out for assurances that Prague's foreign policy would not be directed against Germany as a result of the Czech-Soviet pact.

It was believed the Nazis also would demand admission of the Nazi "weltanschauung" world outlook) to the Sudeten territory. Finally, Hitler will insist, it was said, that the general project be put into effect immediately, in contrast to what was described here as "to be effective some time in the future."

Hitler "Refuses Crown."

Immediately before the official opening of the congress, a symbolic act of great significance was performed in the six century-old church of St. Catherine, commonly known as the Church of the Meistersingers as scenes of Wagner's opera by that name are laid there.

Brought by the Nazis from once proud Vienna, the crown of the rulers of the "holy Roman empire of the German nation" was officially deposited in the vaulted nave of the church, along with the imperial scepter and orb and other insignia. The sword of Charlemagne, founder of that empire, is among the articles. In the ceremony, Seyss-Inquart turned over the gem-studded relics into the keeping of the city of Nuremberg.

In a sense, the ceremony symbolized the rebirth, under Hitler, of the holy Roman empire—minus the adjective Roman, and perhaps also holy. The first plan, apparently, was to make a gift of these imperial insignia to Hitler. But yesterday the Fuehrer, as a local wit put it, "refused the crown." The emblems were deposited in the church, the dictator keeping for himself only some eighteenth century engravings of them.

Power More Far-Reaching.

But if Hitler scorned to assume personally the insignia of the emperors of the "First Reich," he dreams of power more effective than that which most of them exercised. His goal is a far-reaching Teutonic empire, with hegemony in a territory extending appreciably beyond its frontiers.

With the customary Nazi pageantry in which the military note was stressed, the party congress convened in Leopold Hall at 11 a. m. In his proclamation, which was read by Adolf Wagner, Nazi leader for Bavaria, Hitler made slighting references to the economic systems and the statesmen of democratic countries, occasioned in part by reent pronouncements by President Roosevelt and Cordell Hull, American Secretary of State, on the authoritarian states.

"Improvement of world economy cannot be effected by the slogans of Democratic statesmen, but can be achieved only through the reorganization of the slowly disintegrating economic systems of the democracies. As long as those statesmen deal with the authoritarian states through superficial phraseology instead of looking after their own economies, they not only do nothing for the re-establishment of world trade but, in fact, damage it."

Extracts From the Proclamation of Hitler

Outstanding passages from Chancellor Hitler's proclamation at the tenth annual Nazi Party Congress at Nuremberg follow:

We came to Nuremberg this year more deeply moved than ever before. For many years the party conventions have not only been a festival of joy and pride but have become one of inner consciousness.

Old fighters come here in the joyful hope to see again many old acquantances of the long struggle for power and thus they greet themselves in this city as fighting comrades of the greatest German revolution.

This year, for the first time, the circle has been drawn much wider.

The National Socialist Reich has absorbed new German fellow citizens. Many of them are in our midst for the first time in this sacred hour . . .

It was in these months 20 years ago that Germany's internal decay began. It was not an external enemy that broke our front, but creeping poison in the interior started the decay.

The weakness of a half-way government thus became the reason for the people and the state in our history. A few months later Germany already seemed lost forever. A period of deepest depression and shameful discouragement for our people had begun.

One year after this catastrophe a new symbol arose from the chaos of misfortune and despair. Destiny had called me to carry this. Four years later the first party convention of the Nazi movement was held . . .

Now we meet again for the tenth time. What, however, my fellow citizens, has become of Germany since!

Does it not seem as if destiny prescribed this road for the German people and Reich in order to purify and ripen us all for this greater community of all Germans which in the future is to be looked upon as a prerequisite for continuation of our people?

. . . Perhaps in the future one may speak of a miracle which destiny worked on us. Be that as it may, at the beginning of this miracle stood belief—the belief in the eternal German nation in the eternal German nation . . .

The creative bearer of this rebirth is the National Socialist Party . . .

It had to cleanse Germany of all parasites for whom the distress of the Fatherland and of the people was a source of personal enrichment.

It had to recognize the eternal values of blood and soil and raise them to the level of the governing laws of our life. It had to begin to fight against the greatest enemy which threatened to destroy our people: the international Jewish world enemy. Its task was to cleanse the German nation, our race and our culture from this enemy . . .

Several weeks ago an English paper wrote I had a burning desire to conclude a pact with several states on various subjects because otherwise it would not have been possible for me to appear before the party convention this year.

I never had nor have this intention.

I come before you, my old party comrades, not with a pact but with seven new German districts of my own homeland.

It is a greater Germany that in these days appears for the first time in Nuremberg, as the insignia of the old Reich have returned into this old German city.

They were carried here and accompanied by six and a half million Germans who, today, spiritually unite here with all other men and women of our people.

Stronger than ever, they are embraced by happy consciousness of membership in a great indissoluble community. What every man carries within himself, all carry.

The return of Austria into the greater German Reich gives us an additional task for the coming here. Politically, the construction of national socialism in this territory can be regarded as essentially completed.

Economically, its (Austria's) incorporation in the large sphere and powerful rhythm of German life will make rapid progress.

Several months ago I expressed the confident hope that we would succeed in removing unemployment in this section of the Reich in from three to four years.

Today, I can be more precise about this hope. Already at the end of next year the unemployment crisis in Austria will be completely overcome.

Today, we are only suffering from two real economic troubles:

First, the need of laborers, and especially skilled laborers, in industry, and, second, the need of farm hands. . . .

Through the grace of God, this year we have an abundant harvest. Through the energetic measures of Goering (Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering, head of the four-year plan for German self-sufficiency) it has been possible, in spite of bad harvests in preceding years, to enter the new year with large reserves.

With these reserves and the rich yields of this year's crops, we shall be without food worries for years to come. However, we want to remain frugal. It is our will to store a reserve of bread grains which, under all circumstances, will protect us from every need.

In addition, I ask you, my fellow countrymen, to consider: Whatever the future may bring one thing is certain—one cannot foretell what world economic relations will be. For if it should occur to other people instead of increasing their production to destroy it, then a shortage of exchange goods will sooner or later ruin this so-called world trade.

It is, therefore, more important to keep one's own economy in order, which is, at the same time, the best contribution for possible betterment of world trade. World trade will not be revived through seemingly learned but in reality meaningless phrases of Democratic statesmen, but only can be aided through the putting into order of their own slowly dying Democratic economic life.

So long as statesmen, instead of worrying about their production and bringing their own economics to order, prefer to argue with the authoritarian states in general phrases of partly schoolmasterly and partly fault-finding content, they not only do nothing for restoration of the so-called world economy and especially world trade, but on the contrary harm it.

Germany in any case can say of itself that thanks to its continued increasing internal production it has become not only an increasing buyer of its own products but also of foreign products. . . .

On the whole, German economy is being so constructed that at any time it can be completely independent from other countries and stand on its own feet.

And this is succeeding. The idea of blockading Germany can even now be buried as an entirely ineffective weapon. The national Socialist state, with energy that is peculiar to it, has drawn conclusions from the lessons of the World War. And now as before we hold to the fundamental principle that we would rather limit ourselves in this or that field should it become necessary in order to make ourselves independent from foreign countries.

About all, the following decision always will stand at the top of our economic actions; security of the nation goes ahead of everything else.

Its economic existence is, therefore, to be secured materially in its fullest measure with our own standard of life and our own living space. For only then can the German army be in a position at all times to take the freedom and interests of the Reich under its strong protection.

And then Germany will be also of higher value as a friend and ally for anyone. If I say this on the occasion of the tenth party congress, then I do it in contented satisfaction that also politically, as well as economically, the period of German isolation is over.

The Reich has great and strong world powers as friends.

Party comrades! More threatening than ever, Bolshevist danger of the destruction of nations rises above this world. A thousand fold we see the activities of the Jewish virus in this world pest. . . .

I think I can say in my name and yours how deeply happy we are in face of the fact that another great European power, out of its own experience, its own decision and on its own road, shares the same conception and has drawn the most far-reaching conclusions. . . .

Whatever the way and developments the Fascist and National Socialist revolutions must take because of their own obvious needs, and however independently the two historical revolutions originated and developed, it is fortunate for all of us that in all great, vital questions of our time we find this mutual spiritual attitude, which in this world of unreason and destruction leaves us more and more humanly together.

This new spirit brings the two peoples together according to their inner convictions. . . .

We want to give our deepest thanks to the Almighty for the success of the union of old Austria with the new Reich. Through His bounty He has allowed the German nation a great victory without it being necessary to stake the lives or the blood of our people.

May Germans never forget that this never would have been possible without the united strength of the entire nation in the National Socialism.

For when on the morning of March 12 the flags of the new Reich were carried over the frontiers they were no longer, as before, the insignia of a conqueror but a symbol of the all-engrossing unity of all Germans.

The war flag carried by our young army into the new districts had become the standard of victory in the hard struggle in Austria. This time an idea first conquered and united a nation!

For us and for all who come after us the country of the Germans will now always be only Greater Germany!

U.S. Embassy Asks That Italy Clarify Anti-Jewish Laws

Rome, Sept. 6 (U.P.).—The United States Embassy tonight asked the Italian government to make "certain clarifications" regarding its new anti-Jeweish decrees, particularly as they affect American Jews residing in Italy.

Edward Reed, counsellor of the American Embassy, visited Foreign Minsiter Count Galeazzo Ciano at Chigi Palace and submitted the request. His visit, it was explained, was merely an inquiry as to obscure points of the recent decrees.

The expulsion order is estimated to affect between 10,000 and 15,000 Jews but it was said only a small number were American Jews.

Nazis Close Jewish Store.

Berlin, Sept. 6 (AP).—Police today closed the second well-known Jewish store within a week, giving an infraction of the price fixing law as the reason.

closely guarded secrets, stood watch over the border zones tonight, waiting the outcome of the Czechoslovak crisis.

The German policy of "protection" of the Sudeten German minority in Czechoslovakia, and France's pledge to fight for the Czechoslovak republic if it is invaded, led the two nations to take military measures unparalleled in recent years.

The French even went so far to mine a number of railroad and highway bridges along their frontier zone.

Germans Ridicule Mine.

This precaution caused loud laughter from the Germans talking to Frenchmen from behind the high wire barricades which mark the frontier at Rosbruck near Forbach.

"We have no intention of attacking France," a husky German customs guard at Rosbruck said. "But we are taking plenty of defensive precautions."

German troops garrisoned in the new Siegfried Line apparently were engaged in maneuvers around their new positions. At Stiring-Wendel frontier station, machine gun fire and occasional rifle shots could be heard in the hills above Saarbrucken.

One of the most striking things in the Maginot zone is the few troops that are seen moving along the roads.

The normal garrison of the line is generally given at about 100,000 men, but officers in the zone said they thought 350,000 would be a "conservative" estimate of the garrison's present strength.

The only German soldiers Frenchmen could see were the few stationed at the new blockhouse beside each road leading into Germany.

London Anxious.

London, Sept. 6.—Although lacking details of the Czech government's latest offer to meet the demands of the Sudeten German minority, the British government anxiously waited tonight to see whether the plan would be accepted as a basis for negotiations.

If another deadlock arose it was thought here that Lord Runciman, Britain's unofficial mediator, would step in and produce a compromise scheme ostensibly of his own design, although drafted and inspired by Whitehall.

Continued delay in settling the dispute is getting official London's nerves on edge. Reichsfuehrer Hitler contributed to the uneasiness here by deliberately refraining today from mentioning the Sudeten German problem in his proclamation opening the Nazi Party congress at Nuremberg.

Officials here think Hitler may have "something up his sleeve" for disclosure at Nuremberg next Monday. They would not be surprised, but much alarmed, if he announced that the Henlein party had decided to organize a plebiscite in Sudetenland on the basis of which Germany would "act."

British Fleet Moves.

London, Sept. 6 (AP).—Half a hundred warships of Britain's Home Fleet steamed out of Portsmouth and other bases today for a cruise of ten weeks in the North Sea, fully provisioned and armed for active service at any moment.

Muth Co., 710 Thirteenth street northwest.

A safety poster contest, sponsored by George E. Muth, president of the concern, was announced, offered a year's scholarship to any local art school conducting Saturday classes.

The contest is open to boys and girls under 14 years of age. Cash prizes will be given to runners-up. Rules of the contest—which closes September 29—may be obtained at the Muth company or The Washington Post.

The posters must carry out the themes of "child safety," "walk safely," "back to school safely," "play safely" or "drive safely." The following will act as judges:

Miss Ann F. Abbott, of the Abbott Art School; Jawne Allen, of the National School of Fine and Applied Arts; Miss Ethel Bray, head of the art department, District of Columbia public schools; Richard Lahey, of the Corcoran Art School; Frank Steele, president of the Arts Club, and Eugene Weisz, of George Washington University.

150 Y. M. C. A. Boys Sign Up.

Pledged to further child safety activities during the remainder of the school vacation, 150 boys at the Y. M. C. A. yesterday signed agreements to practice safe playing and walking habits on Washington's traffic-clogged streets.

Under the direction of William T. Fry and E. H. Thacker, associate directors of the Y. M. C. A. boys' department, the third in a series of traffic safety meetings will be held at noon today. Policeman A. S. Miskell, Third Precinct director of schoolboy patrol units, will gve an illustrated lecture.

Free of Mishaps.

The growing list of safe drivers enrolled under The Post-Junior Board safety banner was joined yesterday by 53 truck operators of the Good Humor Ice Cream Co. Robert F. Brimer, local manager of the concern, agreed to co-operate in the movement and display Post-Junior Board safety emblems on his trucks.

Washington streets remained free of serious mishaps yesterday. Five persons were treated at local hospitals for injuries received in nearby Maryland.

Three persons were hurt in one crash on Queens Chapel road across the District line. Treated at Casualty Hospital for lacerations and bruises, they gave names of James Ross, colored, 28, of Takoma Park, Md., Viola Ross, 26, of the same address, and Ernest Garrett, 34, colored, also of Takoma Park.

Dudley Smoot, 20, of T. B., Md., was brought to Casualty Hospital from an accident near Silver Hill, Md. He was treated for a lacerated head and injuries to his throat. His condition is undetermined.

When her car struck a lamp post on Bladensburg road in Maryland, Irene Marze, colored, 38, of 1223 Fifteenth street northwest, suffered a fractured left leg. She was taken to Casualty Hospital.

Say it with a Clear Skin

NO man or woman wants to have a finger poked at them or receive sympathy because of an unhealthy skin appearance.

Some skin troubles are tough to correct, but we do know this—skin tissues like the body itself must be fed from within.

To make the food we eat available for strength and energy, there must be an abundance of red-blood-cells.

S.S.S. Tonic builds these precious red cells. It is a simple, internal remedy, tested for generations and also proven by scientific research.

You, too, will want to take S.S.S. Tonic to regain and to maintain your red-blood-cells . . . to restore lost weight . . . to regain energy . . . to strengthen nerves . . . and to give to your skin that natural health glow.

Take the S.S.S. Tonic treatment and shortly you should be delighted with the way you feel . . . and have your friends compliment you on the way you look. There is no substitute for this time-tested remedy. No ethical druggist will suggest something "just as good."

S.S.S. Tonic stimulates the appetite and helps change weak blood cells to strong ones.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

On every conceivable subject, there are oceans of data in the Capital. Much secret power is wielded by those studious pleaders who have the gumption and audacity to read this data, because for the more mercurial, lazy officeholders it simply does not exist.

Gen. Gibbins . . . good chow

A few unsung heroes know their way to the document rooms or the files and know how to find what they need. They turn the pages.

• • • •

But it's a rare virtue. That's why, so often, the evidence that appeared in yesterday's Congressional Record is solemnly read again into the record of today's Congressional investigation . . . Most of the lawmakers know only what they read in the papers.

POTOMAC MEDLEY: In the great off-stage Abie's Irish Rose team of Corcoran & Cohen, one is the hare, the other the tortoise; guess which . . . Well, when you call a legal wizard named Cohen a tortoise, you're on delicate ground; but it's Corcoran who's the swift, almost instantaneous hare. Corcoran can dominate a room conversationally, and can't be interrupted; Cohen pontificates so diffidently that if blocked in midsentence he's apt to shrug and shut up like a clam.

"—naval battle off Cape Cod"

If you snoop around the Navy Department you're apt to run across the official preliminary report on the greatest naval engagement of the World War in American waters. Just 20 years ago a crowd of bathers on Cape Cod was electrified when a German submarine attacked the tug Perth Amboy and four barges off the seaward elbow of the Cape.

• • • •

It was a hot day, and many of the bathers had driven out from Boston to go swimming. The German marksmanship was abominable, and the Kaiser's sailors banged away for an hour before they sank the barges and burned the tug. Four Navy planes took off, but arrived too late.

• • • •

Many bathers went to hide in cellars.

There were three women and five children on the barges. I wonder where they are now, and if they ever tell their children about their naval battle.

Ever since Cape Cod has been a little more restful.

CAPITAL CAPERS: Once Senator Bennett Clark rented a house after looking at only one room, the library. He owns more books than almost anyone in Congress . . . You'd never guess it to look at him now, but Edgar Hoover, G-mastermind, was anemic as a boy; a bookworm, he was valedictorian of his high school class. He filled out later.

"—our heroes eat better now"

To see what a 1938 American soldier gets to eat would infuriate a Minute Man of '76. Our Revolutionary forefathers subsisted on 11 cents worth of flour, rice, dried peas and beef a day, with a pint of milk and a quart of spruce beer to wash it down. Now there are 36 separate items in the 50-cent daily ration of the spruce soldier boys you pass on the street, even if they don't get them every day. Even the grousers say Maj. Gen. Henry Gibbins, of the Q. M. C., sets a good table. No beer, though.

At our embassy in Mexico City, Ambassador Josephus Daniels told an attache one day to prepare a report on the Mexican situation. Four days later he discovered it was not yet prepared.

"I'll have it ready for the pouch next week," said the young attache.

"Young man," said the Ambassador, who first attained fame as a newspaper editor, "we print a daily paper in this embassy, not a monthly magazine."

Since then our diplomatic reports from Mexico have been coming through more promptly.

DIPLOMATIC DIDOES: Some of the younger diplomatic crowd were discussing their children the other evening, and one of them asserted that all his children could be left-handers if they showed any inclination that way. In proof, he cited the fact that King George VI became a stammerer because his nurse forced him, when he was a small boy, to switch his spoon and pencil from left hand to right.

Last Touches Put on State's Aged-Aid Act

Local Budgets Await Appropriations by Counties.

Payments Under New Program Set to Start, Says Dr. Stauffer.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Sept. 6.—Dr. W. H. Stauffer, State commissioner of public welfare, announced today that a majority of the local welfare budgets have been submitted to the State welfare department and have been returned to the local governing bodies for appropriation of the counties' share in financing old-age assistance.

The recent approval by the Social Security Board in Washington of the Virginia plan entitles the State to Federal grants for financing half the costs of payments to the aged and a third of the costs of payments to dependent children.

Dr. Stauffer said that since nearly all of the counties and cities of the State have organized and appointed the required staffs for administering the new program, it is necessary only for the local welfare budgets to be approved before payments may be started.

The first cases to be handled will be those which are now on general relief, he said. General relief cases which fall within the requirements for aid to the aged will be transferred to this category in accordance with the instructions sent out from the State department of public welfare, while those cases previously carried as mothers' aid cases under the provisions of the old law likewise will be transferred to the group for aid to dependent children.

Sen. Byrd to Talk Today at Virginia Farmers' Picnic

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Woodstock, Va., Sept. 6.—An estimated 3,000 northern Virginia farmers and their families will gather here tomorrow to hear an address by Senator Harry Flood Byrd, of Virginia, the highlight of the annual picnic and outing sponsored by the Shenandoah Co-operative Farm Bureau.

The appearance of Senator Byrd here tomorrow will mark his first visit to this immediate section of the Shenandoah Valley in several years, and in view of his attitude toward many phases of the New Deal as expressed by his vote in Congress, there is some speculation among his constituents as to whether his remarks will be of a political nature.

Guests at the annual picnic will be entertained by games and a concert by the Shenandoah County School Band.

Hagerstown Area Schools Reopened

Hagerstown, Sept. 6 (AP).—An estimated 15,000 Washington County school children trudged back to school today. Superintendent B. J. Grimes said enrollment is expected to be several hundred above that last year, with the high school total increasing approximately 200.

Leonardtown, Md., Sept. 5 (AP).—Public schools of St. Marys and Charles counties called children today from the round of summer pleasures afforded by numerous shore resorts of this section. Teachers of St. Marys County will hold their first meeting of the year here Friday night.

5 Felons Slug Jailer, Escape At Warrenton

Fugitives, Who Assaulted Octogenarian Turnkey, Still at Large.

By the Associated Press.

Warrenton, Va., Sept. 6.—Five prisoners escaped from the Warrenton jail last night after assaulting the octogenarian jailer and taking his keys.

J. W. Shirley, 81, was knocked unconscious by the fugitives but was not believed seriously injured.

When last seen the five—Edward Sudduth, Roy Reid, Edward Roberts, James Embrey and Carroll Roberts—were heading down the Southern Railway tracks toward Calverton.

The men remained at large today after an all-night search by Fauquier County Sheriff W. S. Woolf, County Officer Keith James and Town Officers S. S. Hall and Tom Stafford.

Two Pastors Hurt In Auto Collision

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charles Town, W. Va., Sept. 6.—The Rev. Dr. C. G. Sydnor, pastor of the Presbyterian church here, and his assistant, the Rev. W. F. Junkin, narrowly escaped serious injury last night when the automobile turned over after a collision with a car driven by Israel Timbers, colored, of Martinsburg.

None of the occupants in the Timbers care was injured. The injuries to the local men are not expected to be serious.

None Hurt as Fire Wrecks U. S. Ship

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 6 (AP).—Officers of the fruit ship Worden, of the Standard Fruit & Steamship Co., reported here today that a sister ship, the Truxton, had burned to the water-line off Aux Cayes, Haiti.

The Truxton's master, N. Soderberg, and members of the crew were saved, a spokesman from the Worden said. The cause and time of the fire were not given.

Keyser Fire Company Elects Brunk as Head

Special Dispatch to The Post.

U. of Va. Set For Record Enrollment

Term Opening Sept. 15 to See 10% Bigger Entering Class.

About 2,800 Expected Despite More Rigid Requirements.

By the Associated Press.

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 6.—University of Virginia officials are preparing for an increase in enrollment for the 1938-1939 session in every department except medicine, in which the number admitted each fall is fixed. The last regular session's enrollment was 2,741, largest in the university's history.

Advance registration figures for this year's session, opening September 15, indicate the entering class may be 10 per cent larger than the number of first year students admitted last year, despite more rigid entrance requirements in several departments.

The college of arts and sciences is expected to show the largest increase of first year men. Preparations are being made to add new class sections to the first year courses in order to accommodate the large number of new men.

In the department of law 165 have been admitted to the first year class and a waiting list of more than 50 applicants remains to be passed upon. In engineering the entering class is expected to be about 100 and a proportionate increase is expected in the education department.

The department of medicine limits the number of first year men to 68. Entrance examinations for first year students will begin Monday, with registrations in all departments opening Thursday, September 15, and first classes for the 115th session, beginning Monday, September 19.

Prince Mike Back In Fredericksburg On Research Work

Fredericksburg, Va., Sept. 6.—Prince Mike Romanoff, erstwhile King George County farmer, was back today, but not for long, for he said he must return to Hollywood.

Leaving here two years ago in a second-hand automobile, Mike returned today in a sleek high-powered convertible coupe.

Mike produced a card showing that he is on the pay roll of Twentieth Century-Fox Studios as an actor-writer. He is doing a story of the life of John Paul Jones for his studio and says he intends to do some research work while here.

Va. High Court Opens New Term

Staunton, Va., Sept. 6 (AP).—The Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals opened its September term here today with only Justice Browning absent.

No indication was given as to when the committee of three justices would announce rules for integration of the Virginia bar, authorized by the 1938 General Assembly.

Among those qualifying to practice before the court were Max Rhoade, H. Max Ammerman, Donald R. Willey, Mountrie Hitt, Samuel B. Brown, Raymond Spencer Sifdol and Barney Joseph Keren, all of Washington.

Va. Resumes Exports Of Leaf to Shanghai

Newport News, Va., Sept. 6 (AP).—Export of American tobacco from Hampton Roads to Shanghai has begun again on a small scale after being interrupted for more than a year by the Sino-Japanese war.

Several cargoes have left this port for Shanghai, Harry Keitz, local shipping official said today, and others are expected to pass through Newport News as the tobacco season continues.

Carillon Recital Tonight To Honor Col. Northcott

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Homesteader Evicted by U. S. From Ida Valley

Family of 4 Ordered to Move After Charges of Disturbances.

By the Associated Press.

Luray, Va., Sept. 6.—Caspar Broyles must leave his home in the Ida Valley project by tomorrow. With him will go his wife, Edith, 22, and their two children, Gladys, 2 years old, and Lewis Caspar, 2 months old.

Caspar's hogs and his cow and calf, purchased by means of a Government loan, were removed today by Government officers. The homesteader had been told to leave today, but asked permission to remain until tomorrow because he had been unable to find a house.

Broyles was given a hearing at Elkton several months ago by representatives of the regional office of the Form Security Administration at Raleigh, N. C. Heard at that time were charges by Broyles that he was dissatisfied with his neighbors and charges by the neighbors that Broyles created disturbances.

Chester C. Hough, community manager of the Shenandoah Park project, said today that former Shenandoah National Park residents who move into the homesteads do not have the right to interfere with the rights of others.

The Broyles family is the first to be ordered to leave the homestead project. Hough said moving orders are issued by the regional office of the Farm Security Administration at Raleigh.

Richmond, Va., Sept. 6 (AP).—Andy Campbell, 21, of Highland Springs, hiked the 55 miles from Fredericksburg to Richmond in 10 hours and 55 minutes to win first prize—a gold cup and $5 in cash—in yesterday's walkathon.

Neils Neilson, 52, of Elko, trudged across the finish line at the State Fair grounds seven minutes behind Campbell. Third was Dick Sadler, of Hopewell.

Colored Woman Is Slain At Md. Church Festival

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Bryantown, Md., Sept. 6.—James Johnson, colored, about 30, today surrendered to Deputy Sheriff J. D. S. Roberts, of Hughesville, Md., to face charges of fatally shooting Ida Hawkins, also colored, of Hughesville.

Preceded by a quarrel, the shooting was reported to have taken place at a church festival last night in Bryantown.

Dodd Declares Libraries Help to Keep Democracy

Purcellville, Va., Sept. 6 (AP).—William E. Dodd, former Ambassador to Germany, believes persons contributing to libraries, schools and other institutions of learning help "to maintain the democracy of this country."

"The whole truth should be presented to students today, and freedom of thought and activity stressed." Dodd said in an address at the dedication of the new Purcellville library.

"If we go down," he said, "the whole world will go down."

Sidney B. Hall, State superintendent of public instruction, said "libraries are becoming an integral part of the school and they are to the school what the heart is to the human body." He discussed the relationship of libraries to the field of education.

Shenandoah Park Visitors Set High

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Front Royal, Va., Sept. 6.—Visitors to the Shenandoah National Park through the Front Royal entrance, over the Labor Day weekend, established a record since the northern end of the park was opened on October 1, 1936.

Visitors entering at Front Royal, Saturday, Sunday and Monday totaled 28,531, according to a check at the park entrance here, Park Ranger W. D. Chick jr., reported last night. The number of cars was 7,632. This was an increase of 30 per cent over the Labor Day weekend of 1937. The number of visitors on Sunday alone was 17,227.

70 Policemen Escort Trucks Past Pickets

One Arrested After Brick Is Hurled; 2 Seized After Assault.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Sept. 6.—A convoy of about 70 policemen in scout cars and on motorcycles escorted 11 trucks through a picket line of truck drivers as the strike of 2,500 drivers entered its sixth day.

One colored man was arrested after he allegedly threw a brick at one of the first trucks to leave the garage of the Baltimore Transfer Co.

The line of trucks moved today were part of the 19 loaded last night. As the motorcade moved from the garages the police escort ranged ahead and on the sides. Several bricks were thrown but no one was injured.

Two men were arrested after Edward Enos, 22-year-old driver for the transfer company was punched as he attempted to unload his truck in a driveway. Guy du Frainoi, 30, was charged with assault and battery and Joseph Svaboda, 32, was charged with disorderly conduct. Both said they were truck drivers.

Md. Traffic Deaths Continue Decline; 33 Die in August

Baltimore, Sept. 6 (AP).—Maryland's automobile fatalities continued to drop during August but 33 persons were killed, the commissioner of motor vehicles announced today.

Commissioner Walter R. Rudy reported 240 deaths for the eight months ended August 31 as compared to 358 for the first eight months in 1937. There was a decrease in each of the eight months over the previous year, the previous August having 39 deaths.

Passengers in automobiles bore the brunt of fatalities, 16 being killed while only six drivers died. Of the 10 pedestrians who walked to their death, three were children, the report showed.

Baltimore, with approximately half the State's population had 10 deaths in August as against 23 in the counties.

Ten Military Units to Parade in Queen's Review.

Daughter of Mexican Envoy to Receive Crown Friday.

By the Associated Press.

South Boston, Va., Sept. 6.—Ten military units will participate in the Queen's military review here Thursday when Senorita Erma Castillo Najera will make her first public appearance as queen of the fourth annual national tobacco festival.

Orders were also issued for the 116th infantry band to participate, in addition to the other bands, and drum and bugle corps.

Senorita Castillo Najera, daughter of the Mexican Ambassador to the United States, will be formally introduced Thursday night, immediately preceding the staging of the pageant masque, "Salute to Tobacco," depicting the story of tobacco. The festival queen will be accompanied by princesses representating seven tobacco growing States.

Later Thursday night, Senorita Castillo Najera will attend the harvest ball, a square and round dance, and will present winners of the "big apple" contest with prizes and crown the King and Queen of "Jitterbugs."

She will be the leading figure in the float parade Friday afternoon. She will ride on an especially constructed float of elaborate design, and will be followed by floats carrying her court of 100 princesses.

The coronation ceremony will take place Friday night, when Senorita Najera will be crowned "Regina Tobacco IV" by Oscar Littleton Chapman, Assistant Secretary of the Interior. The coronation ball that night will be the final feature of the festival.

Schools to Open, Gov. Price Sounds Safety Warning

Richmond, Va., Sept. 6 (AP).—Gov. Price today urged the co-operation of automobile drivers in a campaign for safety with the opening of the schools.

The chief executive called attention to the fact that 650,000 Virginia boys and girls start back to school this month and will be riding in buses and automobiles and crossing streets and highways.

"Emphasis will be placed on safety in public schools" he said, and motor vehicle officers will be available for lectures.

Receiver Asked For Lawson Firm

Baltimore, Sept. 6 (AP).—Alleging that "great fraud and deception was practiced upon her" by officials of the Consolidated Distillers' Corporation and William P. Lawson, self-suspended police commissioner, Mary F. Garrigues filed suit seeking a receivership for the corporation today.

The stockholder's suit alleged the company is insolvent. Judge Frank Eli signed an order giving the corporation until Saturday to show cause why a receiver should not be appointed.

The suit declared that Lawson, who was indicted on 12 charges in the operations of his brokerage concern, was "according to information received by your complainant, not a stockholder in fact, but has been the managing director of the company."

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

At Dallas the other evening, Washington Redskins succeeded only in raising their average from .000 to .0000 in the All Star League. And off their failures in Chicago and Texas, there seems to be a disposition to regard their future in the National Professional League as very uncertain, indeed.

POVICH.

But we do not think that the Redskins should be judged too harshly on their efforts against the college boys. Folks should know now, if they didn't know it before, that an All Star college team is one tough customer, especially at this stage of the season.

As graduates of three years of varsity football in the high-powered football schools of the Nation, they are better than green hands, these All Star collegians. And on their side is youth and speed. They are no mere team, they're a finely sifted group of the best, and what they lack in cohesion as a unit they make up in native ability to play the game.

At both Chicago and Dallas, the Redskins were a sluggish crew. Not that they didn't want to win those two ball games and failed to give 100 per cent. They did that, but they were leg weary and tuckered at the end of 30 minutes. Guys out of college four, five and six years don't respond so quickly to early-season training. The spirit is willing, but . . .

No Cause for Real Alarm.

We don't think that there's any cause to view the Redskins' future in the professional league with any concerted alarm. It's hard to forget that last year at the end of the season, the Redskins were not only the best club in the league, but the best club by a margin that was very convincing. That 49-14 victory over the Giants, for instance.

Last season, too, the Redskins were no champions at the outset of the league race. Two of their first four games they lost in the first month of the season—to the Chicago Cardinals, a lowly Western division club, and to the Philadelphia Eagles, who managed to finish last in the Eastern division.

But when the second half of the season began, the Redskins started to click with all their power. When they knocked off Green Bay, the Giants and the Chicago Bears on successive Sundays they functioned not only as a fine football team but perhaps as the greatest football team ever assembled.

But Battles Is Gone.

It's a bit risky, though, to speak of the Redskins in terms of 1937 for one reason. That reason is Cliff Battles, who is now an assistant coach at Columbia University. No football team can kiss off a fellow like Battles and take it lightly. When they lost Battles, the Redskins lost not only the league's greatest ground gainer but a climax runner—a fellow who was always bent on touchdowns whenever he crossed the scrimmage line with a ball in his hand.

In the hysteria over Battles' offensive exploits last season it was easy to forget what a power he was to the Redskins' on the defense. He was the key man of the defense against passing and it is fairly safe to say that three of the four touchdowns scored by the College All Stars on passes would not have eventuated with Battles in the Redskins' backfield.

Oher pro league clubs—the Bears, the Eagles and the Cardinals—have been beating All Star College teams in various parts of the country while the Redskins have been losing, but that, too, is no cause for alarm by Redskin supporters. Because the Redskins were meeting the best of the College All Stars. Those other pro teams were playing leftovers who were not chosen for the Chicago or Dallas games.

Both of the Redskins' defeats are easily traceable not to their deficiencies against forward passes, but to their failure to round into condition at this stage of the season. Despite the fact that they were beaten by passes, the Redskins' pass defense was entirely adequate until they wearied in the second half of each contest.

Lost in Second Half.

At Chicago, Isbell's passes created no panic whatsoever in the first half, and at Dallas, despite the fact that 33 passes were thrown in the first two quarters by the Collegians they failed to score. Like Chicago, it wasn't until the second half that the Collegians' passes clicked.

And similarly the Redskins' own passing attack suffered in the second half of each game. With Baugh limping and demanding more than the usual protection of blockers in his passing, he received less. The Redskin blockers were simply too weary to take out the onrushing Collegians who were pumped into the game in fresh streams.

The Baugh who performed at Chicago and Dallas was not the Baugh who rocked the Packers, Giants and Bears with his stabbing heaves last fall. With his every step bringing pain, he was literally hobbled. In the Redskins' backfield he was no triple threat, for the opposition knew he would not run with the ball and it is Baugh's threat as a runner, as well as a passer, that opens up the enemy defense.

Baugh's injury, while painful, is hardly of a character to cause deep concern. With proper rest he will be ready to take his old place in the Redskins' backfield as a 60-minute football player and the best forward passer extant. Save for the fact that the Redskins, smarting from their defeat at Chicago, wanted to win that Dallas game badly, Baugh would not have played more than ten minutes in Texas.

With a limping Baugh in their lineup, with Riley Smith and Don Erwin and Ed Justice out of it, the Redskins at Dallas were hardly the Redskins. Their attack was robbed of its power, its dash and its generalship. With that quartet in good health, the Redskins will be a pretty fair football team.

Giants Beat Bees, 6 to 5

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 6.—The Giants battled uphill all the way today to take a 10-inning, 6-5 decision over the Boston Bees, with Mel Ott, Joe Moore and Alex Kampouris cast in the heroes' roles.

With Dick Coffman on the mound for New York, the Bees pushed over three runs in the first of the tenth on two singles, a sacrifice, a wild pitch and two errors. But that was when the Giants really began to fight. With one out George Myatt drew a pass, Harry Danning's fourth hit sent him to second, and Ott then tied the score with his thirty-third homer of the season.

Navy Drill Is Field Day For Cameramen, Press

Middies Stage Dress Rehearsal for 'Press;' Coach Hardwick Outlines Campaign; Stresses Team Play.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 6.—Arrayed in colorful new haberdashery, Navy's 1938 varsity football squad turned its first official drill of the season today into a dress rehearsal for the benefit of visiting newspapermen and cameramen who descended on this ancient fishing village en masse for the occasion.

While Coach Hank Hardwick outlined the strenous program he has mapped out for his charges to the scribes, and admitted the outlook isn't as promising as it was a year ago, the players posed prettily for the comera-clickers, and had pictures taken which you'll see from time to time throughout the season.

It is a husky squad that will carry the Blue and Gold banner into battle this season, but woefully lacking in experience, and it's going to be a long, hard pull for the tars. But a spirit of optimism prevails among the coaches, and there is a feeling that the squad may surprise its critics with a winning brand of football.

Stresses Team Play.

As Hardwick pointed out, Navy lost most of its backs, and while this may tend to throw the burden on the few experienced men remaining in the early games, it eventually will broing about better balance in the ball carrying department. There must be more four-man play behind the line rather than individual performances, no matter how brilliant, to produce touchdowns.

John Wilson, veteran backfield mentor, added that Navy is going to make all the blocks it missed last season which was a glaring fault in the late games. Blocking comes first this year on the drill list.

A renovation in Navy's gridiron set-up, eliminating the "B" squad of former days, was announced by Commander Ward P. Davis, graduate manager of athletics, who disclosed that henceforth the entire varsity squad will work under Hardwick's direction. Games scheduled for "B" team will be played by low-ranking members of the varsity.

An Added Insentive.

Commander Davis said he believed this arrangement would provide an added incentive for players heretofore assigned to "B" squad, and at the same time develop talent through working with the top-ranking athletes.

A "tentative first team" which went through its pace for the cameramen's benefit included Lou Burke and Lucie Powell, ends; Ben Jarvis and Al Bergner, tackles; Herman Spector and John McMullen, guards; Al Wallace, center, and Emma Wood, Lem Cooke, Ed Gillette, and Ulmont Whitehead in the backfield. Ken Hyson, a tackle, is expected to play an important roel at one of the tackles once the curtain goes up on the campaign.

Indians Trim Tigers, 6 to 0

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Sept. 6.—Bobby Fellers' four-hit pitching performance stretched Cleveland's winning streak to eight games today as the Indians blanked the Detroit Tigers 6 to 0 in the first of a two-game series here.

Feller drove two Cleveland runs across the plate with a pair of singles. He struck out six Tigers and walked five. Only one Detroit runner reached third base.

The Indians bunched hits off Harry Eisenstat, Detroit hurler, in the second and eighth innings to score all their runs. Three hits and an error by Billy Rogell accounted for two runs in the second, and five hits including a double by Rollie Hemsley, the only extra-base blow of the game, sent four runs home in the eighth.

Rookie Fans 9 Men And Checks Rallies

Cuban, Making Big League Debut After Service With Trenton, Allows 14 Hits but Holds Boston Safe Throughout.

By Shirley Povich.

Rene Montegudo, a bantamweight pitcher from Cuba, blossomed yesterday as another of Clark Griffith's late-season specials calculated to stimulate the trade at Griffith Stadium in these dismal days for the Nats.

Standing only 5 feet 6 inches and looking like a fugitive from a watch chain, little Montegudo celebrated his major league debut by outpitching Boston's Jack Wilson and beating the Red Sox 7 to 5.

He gave up 14 hits to the Red Sox but he struck out 9 of 'em at important moments and when matters appeared to be getting out of hand he whipped over a left-handed fast ball that left Red Sox to the number of 12 holding the bags.

Up from Trenton, where he had won 19 games and lost only 6 for what he called a "no good" team, the 20-year-old southpaw was working with only two days' rest since his last pitching chore, but he worked to the entire satisfaction of the meager gathering in Griffith Stadium.

He was a small but potent package, this Montegudo, unawed by the imposing line-up of right-handed Boston hitters. Into the first four innings he packed seven of his strikeouts and pitched scoreless ball until Jimmy Foxx interrupted the calm of the proceedings with his fortieth home run of the season.

But four innings later, with the score tied at 5-5, the bases full of Red Sox and two out, this same Foxx created no panic in the mental processes of the little Cuban, because what did he do but whip three fast balls past Mr. Foxx and strike him out.

And in the ninth inning when the Red Sox filled the bases and made motions toward snatching victory from him, little Monte calmly curved a pitch to Wilson and watched Sammy West seal the Nats' triumph by galloping in for a running catch of Wilson's Texas Leaguer.

Travis Breaks Tie.

Cecil Travis, who had betrayed Montegudo with a wild throw that led to Boston's tying run in the fifth was no drawback to the Nats' cause in the eighth. Banging out his third hit of the game a solid single to right center with two out and the bases full Travis broke a 5-5 tie and put the Nats in their 7-5 lead.

Al Simmons had tripled to right field in the first inning to set the Nats up in a 2-0 lead and in the second they came up with two more runs after West's single, Ferrell's walk, and Montegudo's pop bunt which fell safe, filled the bases. A pair of infield outs fetched the two runs home.

Foxx produced the first Boston run with his third-inning homer, an enormous clout high into the left center bleachers, and in the fifth the Red Sox reared up and tied the score with a three-run surge, Wilson, Cramer and Vosmik punched out singles to drive in one run, another scored on Foxx's fly and Travis presented the Sox with the tying run with a wild throw to first.

Higgins Muffs Grounder.

Wilson, who had settled down to pitching four scoreless innings after the second, was greeted in the seventh by a double by Travis, and with out, Simmons was intentionally passed to bring Myer to the plate. Myer met this affront by swatting a two-bagger to center and the Nats had a 5-4 lead.

The Red Sox packed four hits into the eighth inning to tie the score, but Montegudo limited the damage to a single run by fanning Foxx with the bases loaded, and in their half of the eighth Washington won the ball game this way:

Pinky Higgins muffed Ferrell's hard-hit grounder and Montegudo sacrificed his catcher to second. Wasdell drew a walk, Lewis drew a walk and Travis pciked that situation to thump a single to left and drive two of his colleagues home.

Krakauskas to Pitch Against Macks Today.

Joe Krakauskas, hero of a three-hit shutout performance in his last start, will take the mound today for the Nats in the opener of a series with the Athletics.

New visions of a fourth-place finish for the Nats were conjured yesterday when their victory over the Red Sox, combined with Detroit's defeat, reduced the Tigers' fourth-place margin to two games.

Young Rene Montegudo had instructions to pitch low to Jimmy Foxx yesterday, but apparently forgot them. He is still wondering at the wisdom of his advice, however. He struck Foxx out twice on high pitches and saw Foxx knock one of his low balls for a homer.

Opponent Needed.

Having a playing field, the Capitol Heights Athletic Club are anxious to arrange a game with a strong unlimited nine Sunday. Call Capitol Heights 869 between 6 and 7 p. m. and ask for Hilliary.

Catcher Mancuso Lost to Giants.

New York, Sept. 6 (U.P.).—The New York Giants, pursued all season by the injury jinx, today lost the services of Catcher Gus Mancuso for the rest of the season. Examination of a split finger, suffered in he recent series with the Phillies, revealed that it was more serious than expected. It was the same finger that wa injured last season.

Influx of College Stars Makes Pro Game Tougher—Baugh

By "Slinging" Sammy Baugh,
Forward Passing Champion, National Football League.

SAMMY BAUGH.

Another difference between college football and professional football is that there is no such thing as a "breather" on a pro team's schedule. For the pros, it's a week-to-week grind without a let-up. The college coach can groom his squad for an important game by scheduling a set-up, but the pro coach has no choice in the matter. There are no set-ups in the National League. For example, the Philadelphia Eagles, who finished last in the Eastern Division in 1937, beat the champion Redskins, 6-0, in one game and was beaten only 10-7 in a return game.

The Redskins will have to be a better club this season to repeat. All down the line the opposition is stronger in the Eastern Division. Every club has added power and I'll try to illustrate it.

Last year Dave Smukler represented almost everything the Philadelphia club had in the way of an offense and he was worn to a frazzle. But the Eagles have come up with a lad in Dick Riffle, from little Albright, who has all the earmarks of being a fine running mate for Smukler.

Riffle, according to the reports which reached the Redskins,

Archibald-Dupre Winner May Meet Escobar Here

Down In Front

By Richards Vidmer

Lest We Forget.

New York, Sept. 6.—When the All-Star football team trots on the field at the Polo Grounds tomorrow night, the spotlight will shine for a moment on each individual member and he will be introduced over the amplifiers by name, number and college affiliation. But there is more to each member of the squad collected by Stanley Woodward and coached by Andy Kerr than those simple sounds will reveal.

VIDMER.

The characters that stalk gallantly across the football field each fall change rapidly, and a hero is hardly born before he passes on into the ranks of the graduates and new heroes come up to take his place. And in the rapid turnover, the public may be quick to forget some of the thrilling moments of yesterday in the new excitement of today.

But as Al Hessberg trots out on the field tomorrow night, perhaps there will be a few on the packed Polo Grounds whose memories will turn back to that day last fall when undefeated Dartmouth was playing undefeated Yale in the big bowl at New Haven, and the Connecticut hills were turning purple under the twilight shadows.

Dartmouth was well on its way to another triumph, leading the Blue by a touchdown with only a minute left to play. And although Yale had the ball it was somewhere near midfield. Clint Frank and his team was going down to its first defeat of the campaign so surely that the spectators had started leaving and runways were packed with departing and disappointed sons of Eli.

Al Hessberg had sat on the bench through most of the struggle; sat and waited for his coach's call. And finally it [illegible] come. But it seemed too late. Whatever he had hoped to do to turn the tide, there was little time in which to do it. But as the crowds departed and the final minute ticked away, while the shadows gathered, Frank faded behind the Blue line, stood poised for a second with the ball held high above his head, and then hurled it like a bullet toward the fleet figure slanting out toward the right.

Now or Never.

Hessberg reached into the air, grabbed the ball and started toward the Dartmouth goal line. One tackler and then another threw himself at the fling legs in Blue and were shaken off. Another was outraced, and in a last determined dash, where nothing short of a touchdown would avail Hessberg sped across the goal line, scoring the touchdown that gave Yale a tie and left the Blue still undefeated.

When another lad from Yale trots out on the field tomorrow night and the name of Dave Colwell is shouted over the loud speakers, there will be many memories will turn back to his college years and his brilliant, awe-inspiring punts on many fields. And some may remember most vividly his dramatic entrance in the Princeton game two seasons back, and his exit which at the moment appeared to be a tragedy but which turned out to be a laugh.

Colewell had been operated on for appendicitis only a few weeks before and it was thought to be only a gesture when he was allowed to sit on the bench in uniform. But toward the end of the game Yale was backed up against its own goal line and a prodigious punt was needed to drive the snarling, fighting Tigers back into their own territory. There fas a flurry on the Yale sidelines. A big figure emerged from a blanket and dashed out onto the field, Colwell.

Tense Moments.

The spectators, knowing of his recent operation gasped. It was dangerous for this lad to go into the game. He might be permanently injured, they thought. And they held their breaths as he stepped back to the kickers' position, stretched out his arms to receive the pass from center and sent the ball sailing off his powerful toe far down the field.

He continued to remain in the game for a couple of plays, and then what everyone had feared apparently happened. After a scrimmage, everyone regained his feet except Colwell. He ay on the ground, stretched out and still. They carried him off and the spectators looked down from the stands through specked eyes. This, they whispered, was too great a risk, too great a sacrifice to make simply to win a college football game.

But there was anexplanation, which provided the comic relief. Colwell hadn't been hurt. He was as well as the moment he entered the game. But Yale had had its quota of times out and another, unless a player were injured, would mean a penalty. So Larry Kelley, captain of the Blue, had whispered into Colwell's ear to play "dead." And Colwell had winked when Frank Wandle, a worried frown on his face, had dashed out onto the field and picked him up to carry him away.

Monday Night Foes Want October Bout

Featherweight Crown Would Be Stake; Eagerness for Battle Surprises Ahearn; Tune-Ups for Sixto Scheduled.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Gunning for titles in wholesale quantities, a la Armstrong, skinny little Sixto Escobar last night challenged the winner of Monday night's Archibald-Dupre bout to a fight for the featherweight championship of the world in October at Griffith Stadium.

Sixto, reigning bantamweight king, no speaka da English, but Manager Lou Brix knows enough of the king's jargon to do business with Matchmaker oldie Ahearn, who is similarly blessed; and the pair of them discussed negotiations at great length Monday night after Escobar defeated Lou Transparenti at Baltimore.

ARCHIBALD.

This bout, incidentally, marked Sixto's first appearance in working clothes in five months and a faint odor was noticeable in the house after hostilities ended, but Brix hastened to explain that this was because of his little man's long, enforced idleness. A couple of tune-up bouts, according to Brix, is all Escobar needs to regain his old form.

Meets Jack Portney.

The first of these is scheduled September 19 when he tackles Jack Portney at Baltimore, and Sixto probably will fight the second at a small club in New York. Then, senor, bring on the new featherweight titleholder!

With a second championship match for the taking, Ahearn wasted no time communicating with both Archibald and Dupre, and almost collapsed when agreed to defend the title against the Puerto Rican.

Al Weill, who pulls the strings on Archibald, expressed the humble opinion that Sixto will be much easier for his boy than Dupre.

"He'll Moider 'Em!"

"Why," he scoffed, "Why Joey'll moider both them bums in one night. We should be ashamed of ourselves for even taking the Dupre bout."

Al LeFevbre, Dupre's manager, was not as outspoken as the enemy field marshal, but quietly admitted that Tony could whip Sixto with one hand and bash in Archibald's nose with the other.

With arrangements thus tentatively completed, Ahearn is figuring on putting on the show October 17 at Griffith Stadium to close out the summer season with what he hopes will resemble a bang. The matchmaker is proud of the fact that the firm of Turner & Ahearn exhibited two champions in the same ring three years ago when it lured Tony Canzoneri and Frankie Klick into the ball park for a 10-round bout.

If the match is made, Escobar would have most to gain, inasmuch as he would stand to annex the featherweight crown, while a defeat would not necessarily go against him. He weighs in the neighborhood of 122 pounds, and might be more of a match than either Dupre or Archibald suspect.

Greentree's Poloists Win

Reach Finals by 20-7; Bostwick Stars.

By the United Press.

Westbury, N. Y., Sept. 6.—Rapping home goals on an average of one every three minutes, Greentree's pink-shirted riders today breezed into the final round of the United States open polo championships with a 20-7 victory over the Ramblers at International Field.

The winners, runners-up last year and champions in 1935 and 1936, scored their first goal before the echo of the starting bell had died away. And they continued rapping them in so regularly that the scoreboard attendants were complaining of sore arms long before the halfway mark had been reached.

Greentree, on Sunday, will meet the winner of tomorrow's other semifinal between Old Westbury, the defending champions, and an outfit which is known as the Auroras. Old Westbury is favored to win.

Greentree, sparked by little Pete Bostwick and powered by the great Tommy Hitchcock, was hed hot, which is more than can be said for the weather. A chill autumn wind whipped across the field and held the crowd down to 1,500.

Bostwick, so tiny that he looks like a little monkey perched on an elephant, was high goal man of the day with nine.

'Skins Sign 'Rink' Bond

Released Back Returns; 'Cut' Due Tomorrow.

Aiming to remedy a critical backfield situation, the Redskins yesterday signed Randall "Rink" Bond, former University of Washington quarterback.

Bond was released by the Redskins ten days ago, but he was induced to sign a contract again following the injury to Riley Smith, regular quarterback.

A stocky 195 pounder and brother of Chuck Bond, Redskin tackle, "Rink" Bond is expected to see action in the Redskins' opening game of the league season at Philadelphia on Sunday.

The addition of Bond increased to four the number of players Head Coach Flaherty must release before Sunday's game. He is expected to announce the release tomorrow.

The two graduates of Washington colleges who joined the Redskins this season—Jay Turner, G. W. U. back, and Clem Stralka, Georgetown guard—are not among those who will be released, it has been strongly indicated. Two backs, a lineman and an end are to be cut adrift.

At Dallas yesterday, Head Coach Flaherty sent the squad through a long workout before it boarded the train for Washington. The Redskins' coach departed by plane to watch tonight's game at New York between the Giants and the Eastern All Stars.

Pepco Wins Sandlot Crown; Beats O'Donnell's Grill, 8-3

Helmer Allows Opponents Only 6 Hits While Mates Garner 12; 5,000 See Game.

Bill Helmer, a tall, slim righthander with plenty of speed pitched, 6-hit ball as Pepco captured the city championship of the week-day leagues by downing C'Donnell's Sea Grill nine, 8-3, yesterday on the South Ellipse before a crowd estimated at 5,000.

By virtue of the victory, Pepco earned the right to participate in the National Amateur Baseball Federation tournament to be staged in Pittsburgh on September 10. The victors will leave for tourney play at 4:15 p. m. Friday via train, officials having chartered two special cars.

Johnson With Team.

Accompanying the squad will be Judge Edward M. Curran, Wash B. Williams, vice president and treasurer of the District National Amateur Baseball Federation, and Walter Johnson, who was given an official invitation by Mayor Scully of Pittsburgh. Johnson will also act as manager and coach of the local club.

To return to yesterday's game, O'Donnell's got away to a one-run lead in the first frame, but Pepco came back in the second to tie it up. Thelosers mustered two tallies in the third, mainly due to the hitting of Bill Moore, who collected three hits in four trips to the plate, but the Power boys really clinched the game in their last half of the third.

Hits are Plentiful.

With every man on the team getting at least one hit except Pete Chaconas, second baseman, and with Danny Dansburger, Tonker and Clements banging the ball hard in the third stanza, Pepco stepped out to garner three runs. The barrage continued in the fourth and sixth, when two markers were registered in each inning. But as things turned out, only the big third inning rally was needed.

As mentined before, Bansburger was the hitting star for Pepco, collecting three hits in four attempts, while Moore banged a triple, double and single to lead the loser's offensive.

An impression of Bill Saunders by James Montgomery Flagg

A Name of Fine Traditions since 1788

BILL SAUNDERS comes of a seafaring family. If ever there was a walking expression of the term "shipshape", Bill is just that. He keeps himself and his possessions trim and tidy from stem to stern.

Friends like to cruise in Bill's 50-footer, because of the grub and grog they get. In whiskey, for example, there is always Carstairs. A whiskey bearing a name honored for its illustrious traditions since the nation's earliest days.

The traditionally fine liquors sold under Carstairs auspices have always appealed to "shipshape" men. Thos. Carstairs launched the family business code back in 1788. And each succeeding Carstairs has maintained the high standards of that code.

As a "man who cares", you'll find the present day Carstairs whiskey a first-rate mate for your good taste.

"The name, "Bill Saunders," is not intended to refer to any specific individual, but merely to a type; the type of "man who cares."

Yoder 165th To Tee Off In Amateur

Goodman to Play With Strafaci; Times of Starting Listed.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Three of Washington's five entries in the National Amateur, starting Monday over the Oakmont County Club, near Pittsburgh, are scheduled to start among the last 14 twosomes with Levi Yoder the 165th player to tee off in the field of 169, according to pairings released yesterday by the United States Golf Association.

GOODMAN.

Defending champion Johnny Goodman will play with Frank Strafaci, the Brooklyn favorite, and choice of Wiffy Cox. Congfiressional pro, to win the championship. Ray Billows, last year's finalist, will pair with Charley Yates, British amateur titleholder, in the matches that should draw the galleries.

Benno Janssen, jr., of the host club, will hit the first ball in the forty-second championship at 8 a. m., and the field will play in twosomes until 3 p. m. Starting times have been made for Tuesday's medal rounds but are subject to change as the field will be cut by 20 or 30 players to leave time for a play-off Tuesday evening, if necessary. Match play will start on Wednesday.

Bogart Is First.

First of the District players to leave the tee is Ralph Bogart, 19-year-old Army and Navy youngsters, who plays at 9:35 with O'Hara Watts, Brook Hollow Club, Dallas. Martin F. McCarthy, Beaver Dam, plays 50 minutes later at 10:25 with Edwin A. McClure, Shreveport (La.) County Club.

Miller B. Stevinson, Columbia's veteran qualifier, plays at 1:55 with Henry Styers, jr., Sedgefield Country Club, Greensboro, while Bobby Brownell, medalist in the local sectional qualifying rounds, is paired with Jack Hoerner, North Shore Country Club, Glenview, Ill., at 2:10.

Levi Yoder starts at 2:50 with John O. Levinson, Webhannet Golf Club, Kennebunk Beach, Me., as a partner.

Otto Greiner, one of the three Baltimore players that qualified at Congressional, plays at 11:25 with Harry Todd, Dallas, while Spencer S. Overton goes at 12:40 with Emile Zachariah, Baton Rouge, La., and Ernest Caldwell, third Oriole City entrant, is paired with Henry Castillo, also from Baton Rouge, a member of the Louisiana State University Club.

Burke Meets Platt.

Johnny Burke, Georgetown's intercollegiate champion, who set the pace in the sectional rounds at Providence, plays with the Philadelphia veteran, J. Wood Platt, at 9 a. m.

Ellsworth Vines, the pro tennis ace, making his debut in the tournament, plays with Leonard Martin, of Rye, N. Y., while other featured twosomes include Scotty Campbell and Willie Turnesa at 10:15, Francis Ouimet and Bob Babbish, at 12:05, Former Champion Johnny Fisher and Reynolds Smith, fellow Walker Cup player from Dallas, 1:15-Jess Sweetser, 1922 champion and C. Ross Somerville, the Canadian star who won the title ten years later.

Charles (Chuck) Kocsis, former intercollegiate champion from Detroit, Eddie Driggs, New York veteran and British Walker Cupper Leonard Crawley withdrew, robbing the field of three potential champions, Crawley's place will not be fillley by an alternate, cutting the field to 169 players, from the original 170.

Eighteen hole medal rounds are scheduled Monday and Tuesday, with the low 64 running into two rounds of match play Wednesday and Thursday. The four rounds will ellminate all but four players, and they will battle it out for the title in Friday's 36-hole semifinals with the winners playing twin rounds Saturday, September 17, for Goodman's crown.

Bill Bennings . . . at the Post

Dear Al: Selections at Timonium.

The history of the name "Timonium" is a contradiction of everything which the name of Maryland's State Fair now implies—thrilling sport, carnival gayety and friendly competition. The story dates back to the period of American history when the waters East, South and West of what is now the United States were infested with pirate and treasure ships; when sea travel was only less desirable than overland transportation because of the danger of encounter with the pirate ships. Mrs. Archibald Buchanan, an attractive and popular young matron of Baltimore County and incidentally a sister of Colonial Gov. Thomas Sim Lee was visiting in New Orleans accompanied by a Mrs. Cassandra Deye Owings Van Pradelles, of Cockeysville. Tentative arrangements for their return were made by Mrs. Buchanan who selected the water route via Beaufort, N. C. Shortly before the designated sailing day, Mrs. Van Pradelles had a premonition of danger should she carry out the plans and accordingly postponed her return. Mrs. Buchanan, however, disdained the fears of her friend, and after a long and tedious journey by sail and coach, reached Baltimore safely. Some time later Mrs. Van Pradelles was persuaded by friends to join them in their journey to Baltimore which they had planned would be by boat. The gay party of friends embarked at New Orleans and cruised for several days in the Gulf of Mexico, slowly eastward, without incident. Nearing the treacherous island-dotted area of the Caribbean Sea, the vessel was seized by a murderous band of pirates who not only plundered the ship of its valuable cargo but forced Mrs. Van Pradelles and all her friends as well as the entire crew to "walk the plank."

When the news of the terrible fate of her best friend reached Mrs. Buchanan, who had been anxiously awaiting Mrs. Van Pradelles' return to Baltimore, she was deeply shocked and grieved. Her beautiful home, located just south of the present site of the Timonium Fair and scene of many gay and brilliant social events, became a house of mourning. So great was her sorrow that the mansion, originally known as Haile's Adventure or Betty's Delight, was rechristened Timonium Mansion. The name was suggested by the tower of Timonium near Alexandria, Egypt, to which Marc Antony retired after his defeat in the battle of Actium when all his friends deserted him. The old Timonium mansion still stands to be seen by fair-goers. It is occupied by the Cherbonnier family who are direct descendants of Mrs. Van Pradelles. While the exact date of the building's erection has never been determined, the imported glazed brick, wooden pegs for nails and the exquisite handworked cornices are all evidence of the elegance and beauty which Mrs. Buchanan desired to forego in her sorrow for her ill-fated friend, at least, the Timonium press agent says so.

BILL.

First race—Accidental, winner of two races on the half-milers, seems the best of the juveniles gathered for the opening event. This short sprint route should suite and I'm going to string along. Red Wings has plenty of early foot and should be a contender. Lena Girl has some races that would make her a threat.

Second race—This is a good race to pass up. However, if you must get action on a steeplechase, I'll take Edgemont, the Adams entry of Jacamar and Briar Blue, and Carl's Choice.

Third race—Idyllic, among the also eligibles, seems the best suited of this line-up. Needs only to be in a running mood to take down the chief award. Square Play is fit as that good last and is dangerous. Flying Feet has been fairly successful this year and should find a spot in the money. Mud should aid Ruth Lerner.

Fourth race—Quick Vine, a doubtful starter, gets light weight for this and if in action will be a hard horse to whip. Every Effort did not like the Marlboro track and I expect better things over here. Ado comes back after a rest and is reported fit.

Fifth race—Ladys Favor demonstrated last Monday that she favors this course. Should have won that this. Dona Dulcin knows her way heat and I'm going to back her in around the half-milers and should be a keen factor. Chief Hollis has served notice that he is sharp.

Sixth race—Mahi was messed up soon after the break in that race at Marlboro, Palumbo pulling up several times during the early stages. With clear sailing, this one will be hard to handle. Ben Griffith has been tipped as a good thing. Sally Quick should take down part of the pay.

Seventh race — Morning Flight won a race at this route at the other track and might handle this gang. Luna Bright runs few bad races and should be in the thick of contention. Call Me Anne, on the reserve list, might take it all if in action.

Eighth race—Irish Vote didn't favor the Marlboro course, but should be right there at this course. Ardor is inconsistent, but may be ready to run. Petee Lad is due for sudden improvement.

Ninth race—(Substitute). If this race is used, I'll take Flitting Feng, Oteebee and Wander Bird.

$6.90 Shot In Command From Break

Veritas and Stand By in Dead Heat; $264 Double Pay-Off.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Timonium Fair Grounds, Md., Sept. 6.—Four thousand fans who backed R. B. Archer's Nathan Hale into favoritism in the Towson Nurseries, 4½-furlong feature, saw the gelding finish among the "also rans," with the winner turning up in Willie Zimmerman's Bread King.

Bread King, 6-year-old bay gelded son of Wisdom and Cackie, made every post a winning one. His time of 0:56 1-5 was the fastest of the meeting. He paid $6.90. Place went to J. E. Simmons' Happy Host, with Mrs. E. L. Bull's Tuleyries Lin showing the way to five others.

N HAZEN.

During the running of the feature, Willie Kirk toppled from Rise and Shine's back at the first turn, but managed to hang onto the reins and pull the filly up as she swung into the backstretch.

Dick Pending, track superintendent at Bowie, brought his wife and daughters on from Baltimore to see his Mr. Fingers perform in the day's 4¼-furlong opener. The 2-year-old gelded son of Groucher and Finger Tips didn't let his owner down, but reeled off the distance in 0:57 2-5 to pay $9.30.

A powerful ride by Freddie Faust enabled J. H. C. Forbes' Perfect Liar to take the 6½-furlong second. The gelding paid $18.10, in addition to enabling those fans coupling him with Mr. Fingers in the daily double to collect $264.10.

Those familiar with the stable of Commissioner M. C. Hazen, of Washington, cleaned up when his Worthowning, trained by Frank E. James, track superintendent at Bennings, accounted for the 6½-furlongs of the third. Worthowning, off slowly, closed with a mighty rush the final three eighths to win by two lengths. He paid $23.10.

Charlie Beal's Veritas, early pacemaker in the 6½-furlong fifth, wound up in a dead heat for first place with E. H. Titmus, jr.'s, Stand By, when the latter closed with a tremendous rush through the homestretch. It was the first dead heat of the meeting.

Sun Sweep, an $11.50 shot, won the seventh race, leading Spotless and Famous Clayton to the wire in the distance event. The sixth race went to Justa Giro, paying $8.60. Goodwine was second ahead of Elsie J.

Babe Phelps Breaks Finger; Out 10 Days

Philadelphia, Sept. 6 (AP).—Examination today showed that Babe Phelps, regular catcher for the Brooklyn Dodgers, had broken the ring finger of his right hand in the nightcap of yesterday's doubleheader with the Bees in Boston. Phelps will be out for ten days or two weeks, according to Trainer Eddie Froelich.

EHS to Open Grid Drills

45 Maroons to Report Thursday Morning.

Alexandria, Va., Sept. 6.—Episcopal High will inaugurate an eight-game football schedule Friday, September 23, meeting Eastern High in Washington, according to Athletic Director Bickerton W. "Bick" Cardwell. The Maroons will play five games at home.

Pre-season practice will start Thursday morning, with about 45 candidates expected to report. All varsity men have been requested to report to the school no later than 8 p. m. tomorrow.

Included in the list of candidates are only seven lettermen from last year's undefeated State championship squad. They are Charlie Barrett, Buster Robertson and Bob Nichols, guards; Stanley Woodward, end; Billy Suhling, center, and Ed Bradfield and John Young, backs. The principal problem confronting Coach Cardwell is that of finding a back to replace Howard Goodwin, triple-threat halfback, who has been a member of the All-Virginia prep school squad for the past two seasons.

One of the highlights of the schedule will find the Hill School, of Pottstown, Pa., appearing here for an intersectional contest on October 15.

The Maroons will play three games in defense of the State prep school title they have held for the past two years, meeting Randolph-Macon Academy of Front Royal, Virginia Episcopal School of Lynchburg, and Woodberry Forest School of Orange. The Virginia contest is the feature of homecoming day.

Complete schedule:

September 23, Eastern High School, there.

October 1, McKinley Tech, at home; 8, Randolph-Macon Academy, at home; 15, The Hill School, at home; 22, Gilman Country School, at Baltimore; 29, McDonogh School, at Baltimore.

November 5, Virginia Episcopal School, at home (Homecoming Day); 12, open; 19, Woodberry Forest School, at Orange.

George Washington High football team held its first competitive session this afternoon, and atentative varsity team ran roughshod over a combination of second-stringers.

The starting was composed of Ed Nowland and Ed Snyder, ends; Griffith Schelhorn and Billy Bonta, tackles; Billy Garth and Co-Capt. Harold Payne, guards; Jack Payne, center, nad Charles Scott, Eddie Dove, Co-Capt. Denver Lacey and Ed Williams, backs.

Ralph O'Neil local sandlot grid star of a decade ago, has been appointed coach of the Virginia A. C. unlimited eleven for the coming season. He has called his first drill for tomorrow night at 7:30, at the corner of King and Royal streets.

Former scholastic gridders will provide the nucleus for the Virginia squad.

Chisox Beat Browns, 8-2

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 6.—Monty Stratton, making his first start since he twisted his ankle almost two weeks ago, allowed eight scattered hits today as he pitched the Chicago White Sox to an 8-to-2 triumph over the St. Louis Browns. It was his fourteenth win of the season.

A five-run outburst in the seventh inning clinched victory for the Sox. Chicago clubbed Ed Cole for 11 hits, but the Sox held only a scant 3-2 lead until their big inning.

Joe Kuhel, Gerald Walker and Larry Rosenthal led the attack with two hits apiece.

Rene Monteagudo and Cecil Travis were the twin heroes of yesterday's 7-5 victory over the Red Sox and draw down the bulk of the points in the Man of the Month contest.

To Monteagudo, four points, because he made a sensational big league debut in striking out nine and winning his ball game despite allowing 14 hits.

To Travis, four points, because he contributed three of the Nats' hits, because he figured in four of the Nats' seven runs, because his double aided the Nats to take the lead in the seventh and because his single won the ball game in the eighth.

To Al Simmons, one point because he drove in the Nats' first two runs of the game with his lengthy triple in the first inning.

To Buddy Myer, one point, because his two-bagger put the Nats in front in the seventh inning.

Frick Rules Against Protest; Giants' Defeat of Bucs Stands

Suhr Completed Two Outs When He Stepped Off Bag, League Head Contends.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 6.—President Ford Frick of the National League today ruled that the New York Giants' protested victory over Pittsburgh on August 31 must stand and that the game will not be replayed.

Manager Pie Traynor of the Pirates protested New York's 6-5 victory in the opening game of a double-header on that date because of an umpires' decision involving Gus Suhr, first baseman, and "Pep" Young, second baseman of the Pirates, both of whom were on third base at the same time in the sixth inning.

The umpires declared both Pirates out. But Traynor insisted only one should have been out.

Frick said the evidence showed that Catcher Harry Danning, of the Giants, tagged both men while standing on the bag. Under the National League code, Young, the second man to reach the base, was automatically out when tagged. Then Suhr stepped off the base, and Danning tagged him again, putting him out.

Traynor claimed that Suhr stepped off the base after Umpire Sears had called him out. Frick says the evidence showed Suhr stepped off before he had been called out and he quotes the Pittsburgh third-base coach to support that contention.

Prexy Frick blames the three umpires for the confusion that arose from the play and "in this particular instance aroused the ire of the crowd and resulted in fan actions which only accentuated the situation."

He said, "It appears to this office that a great deal of the trouble was occasioned by the action of the umpires in holding a long conference before the decision was finally announced."

Curt Davis Allows Five Hits; Mates Get 17.

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, Sept. 6.—Curt Davis pitched five-hit shutout ball today while his St. Louis mates were hammering out 17 to defeat Cincinnati 8 to 0 and stretch the gap between the Reds and idle Pittsburgh Pirates to four and one-half games.

Ray Davis held the Gashouse gang to one hit through the first three frames, but was touched for runs in the fourth and fifth frames and gave up 13 safeties before he was replaced by Johnny Vander Meer two-thirds of the way through the eighth, after three more Cards had tallied.

"Double no-hit Johnny" retired the side but gave way to a pinch-hitter. Joe Cascarella hurled the ninth and was touched for three runs on four hits and the only walk of the contest.

Aside from their five safeties, the Reds hit only five balls into the outfield, first baseman Johnny Mize himself accounting for 16 putouts.

Hoyas Stage First Drill

35 Gridmen Report at Hilltop Field.

By Jack Munhall.

Thirty-five Georgetown University football candidates received uniforms yesterday as the Hoyas started preseason practice on the smaller field behind the Medical School. This tract will be used for a week or more until the regular field, which is under repair, is ready.

The squad, mostly sophomores, was given a lengthy outline of plans for the coming season by Head Coach Jack Hagerty, who was pleased at the turnout, largest in recent years.

Five players were A. W. O. L. but are expected to be on hand tomorrow. They are Joe Daniels, sophomore end; Jim Castiglia, soph fullback; Jim Richey, soph center; Mark Ostinato, soph guard, and Joe Mellendick, junior halfback.

Practice was held in the afternoon with Line Coach Mush Dubofsky and End Coach George Murtagh assisting Hagerty. It consisted of calisthenics, limbering exercises and a bit of passing by the backfield men.

Starting today a two-a-day practice schedule will go into effect, with workouts at 9:30 and 2:30, until the opening of the school term, when single sessions will be resumed.

With a difficult schedule ahead and a scarcity of proven material, there is expected to be a merry scramble for all positions. Not one holdover is certain of a job, what with 22 eager sophomores prepared to make a bid for the first eleven.

Georgetown's first game is with Hampden-Sydney on October 1.

Dodgers Nip Phillies, 6-4

Flatbush Crew Passes 4-Run Lead to Win.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Sept. 6.—Vito Tamulis, chunky Dodger Southpaw, settled down after a bad start today to pitch Brooklyn to a 6-4 victory over the Phillies, who were shut out with three hits through the last eight innings.

Brooklyn got away to a one-run lead in the first, off Wild Bill Hallahan, only to have the Phils score four in their half on four hits, including Martin's double, and two errors.

The Dodgers put on a four-hit attack of their own in the second, which drove Hallahan from the mound and put Brooklyn in front to stay. They added their final tally off Claude Passeau in the eighth.

Tamulis walked but two and fanned five for his ninth victory, all of them scored since he came to Brooklyn from the Browns.

Slade Cutter Developed Boyd, Dempsey Protege.

Annapolis, Sept. 6.—Slade Cutter, whose placement goal from a mud hole scored the poinly points of the Army-Navy football game in 1934, and who was unbeaten as a heavyweight boxer, was the developer of Bill Boyd, heavyweight championship hope now under the tutelage of Jack Dempsey.

Cutter met Boyd when the latter was an electrician's mate on the U. S. S. Idaho in 1935, and was just taking up boxing. Cutter, fresh from his college fistic honors, worked with Boyd that year and the next, and saw his charge win the championship of the Navy in the heavyweight class the second year. Boyd also won that honor the following year.

Cutter, now an ensign in the Navy, is a member of the football coaching staff at the Naval Academy, and is watching with interest he career of his formershipmate and pupil.

Jean C. Witter Is Nominated To Head I. B. A.

Five Nominations for Vice Presidents for 1938-39 Also Announced.

Chicago, Sept. 6.—Jean C. Witter, a partner in the San Francisco investment banking house of Dean Witter & Co., has been nominated for the presidency of the Investment Bankers Association of America for 1938-39. This was announced today when the regular ticket of officers and governors, as selected by the board of governors of the association, was made public by Francis E. Frothingham, Coffin & Burr, Inc., president of the association, through its office here. The ticket is to be voted upon at the association's convention in October.

Mr. Witter, who will be the first president of the association from the Pacific Coast, has been in the investment business in San Francisco since 1916, and a member of his present firm since its formation in 1924. He has been active in the affairs of the association since 1930., is at present a vice president, and has been a member of the board of governors since 1934.

Nominations for vice presidents were:

Devereux C. Josephs, Graham, Parsons & Co., Philadelphia; John S. Linen, Chase National Bank of the City of New York; James J. Minot, jr., Jackson & Curtis, Boston; Francis F. Patton, A. G. Becker & Co., Chicago, and Albert E. Van Court, William R. Staats Co., Los Angeles.

Governors were nominated for one, two and three year terms.

Morris Plan Convention.

The nineteenth annual convention of the Morris Plan Bankers Association will be held at the Greenbrier Hotel, White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., October 10, 11 and 12. According to Willard G. Barker, president of the Morris Plan Bank of Washington, and a member of the program committee, the speakers will include Marshall R. Diggs, acting Comptroller of the Currency; Philip A. Benson, first vice president of the American Bankers Association, and Homer A. Holt, Govorner of West Virginia.

A. B. C. Meeting.

12 Cargo Ships Planned by U.S.

By the Associated Press.

The Maritime Commission announced yesterday that it hoped to build shortly 12 of the newly designed C-3 cargo vessels. The announcement said, however, that the number of ships to be constructed would depend in a large measure on prices submitted by the contractors. If prices are "in line with the commission's estimates of costs," the announcement said, 12 ships of the C-3 design would be built.

The C-3 design, the commission said, will incorporate the most modern principles of cargo vessel construction. They will have a speed of 16½ knots and will carry about 7,848 tons of dry cargo and 2,072 tons of liquid. They will have a deadweight tonnage of 11,926; a length of 492 feet overall; a beam of 69 feet 6 inches; depth of 42 feet 6 inches and draft of 28 feet 6 inches. Propulsion will be by a single screw driven by a gear turbine with steam supplied by oil-burning water-tube boilers.

Bids, which will be opened November 18, will be considered for one to six vessels for the same contractor. No yard will receive an award for more than six vessels.

Wheat Prices Tumble to Low For Six Years

Easing of War Tension and Stop Loss Sales Chief Factor.

Chicago, Sept. 6.—Tumbles of 2¼ cents in Chicago wheat prices today to lowest levels in six years resulted largely from reports of lessened war tension in Europe.

Much of the selling pressure here that accompanied the fall of values was due to efforts to put a stop to losses by holders of future delivery contracts, who were especially disturbed because of 3⅛ cents collapse of closing quotations at Liverpool. Action of the Liverpool market was interpreted as confirming a more pacific term of European affairs.

Uncertainty over talk of likelihood of changes in the United States Government's export subsidy plans added to the downward impetus of values. Total absence of export purchases of wheat from this country was shown, notwithstanding that importers could virtually make their own prices.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were around the day's bottom figures, 1⅞-2¼ cents down compared with Saturdays' finish, September 60¼@60⅜, December 62@62⅛, corn ⅛-⅝ lower, September 50@50⅛, December 48@48⅛, oats ⅛-¼ off, rye showing 1¼-1⅝ drop, and provisions 5 to 17 cents setback.

Subsidy Purchases Of Wheat Announced

The Agriculture Department reported yesterday that during the first week's operation of its wheat export subsidy program it bought 5,963,780 bushels and sold 1,849,597 bushels to shippers for sale in foreign markets. The wheat was sold to exporters at prices from 4 to 7 cents a bushel less than the Government paid for it.

The bulk of the wheat—4,082,806 bushels—was bought in the Golf of Mexico region. Purchase in the Pacific Northwest totaled 878,064 bushels and on the Atlantic Seaboard, 8,000. Exports from the Gulf ports totaled 1,178,000 bushels; from the Pacific Northwest, 663,597, and Atlantic ports, 8,000 bushels. The prices the Government paid ranged from 59 to 78.5 cents a bushel.

European Complexities Held Responsible for Weakness in Securities and Commodities.

New York, Sept. 6.—Europe was blamed for everything that went wrong in security and commodity markets today and the blame was not leveled in a very consistent manner. For the threat of war is invariably used as an excuse to boost the price of wheat, inasmuch as this staple is a munition of war, yet today the traders in and around the Chicago pit claimed that an easing in the tension abroad was largely responsible for wheat futures plunging to new lows for the last six years.

And while they were selling wheat, the New York financial fraternity were no less tender with the bullish forces, and they used the unsettled conditions abroad, with the ever present threat of war, as the excuse for their pessimism. The two motives do not hang together.

Cotton futures were carried to new lows for the current movement and the stock market sagged in an uninteresting and dull session, ending the day 0.40 point on the average.

Government bonds kept pace with other financial departments, being irregularly lower, while in the foreign exchange market there was another heavy wave of selling by foreigners in order to transfer their funds into gold or dollars. The result was that the pound sank to $4.82½, where it closed, at its lowest level since April 27, 1935.

Those who were looking for Labor Day to usher in a boom that would discount the seasonal expansion in business, at least derived considerable satisfaction today from comparing how the losses were diminutive, when measured against a year ago.

For on the day following Labor Day in 1937 the Street was also indulging in some wishful thinking. The market had been declining steadily since August 14, and the hope was it would stabilize after the holiday, but instead it settled down to some real breaks on Tuesday, September 7.

Comparisons.

Losses of speculative leaders on that day ranged to more than 9 points and the loss of the composite average was more than 3 points compared with less than half a point today. Moreover the collapse a year ago was accompanied by a large volume of trading, the turnover on the big board being 1,871,150 shares against only 414,560 today. So while today's session held no cheer, the bullish forces can boast as do those executives who point with pride to a declining deficit.

The light volume today was said by some Wall streeters to signify that many of their traders had extended their week-ends; and as far as excitement in lower Manhattan was concerned they might as well prolong the holiday. As disconcerting as was the news from the Czechoslovakian situation, there was enough of a hint of a settlement contained in the Czech government's new offer to its Sudeten German minority to compose those who are banking on there being no war.

Utilities did better than other groups in today's irregularity and there was little change in the lower grade rails. There were a few special movements which were not connected with the general market.

Norwalk Tire preferred was boosted 6 points. This accompanied the declaration of a dividend of $5.25, which clears up the arrears. American Telephone reflected good support and Johns Manville was well taken care of in the building division. United States Rubber, the day's most active stock, was off a point. Chrysler dropped 1½ and there were fractional declines in General Motors, Steel, Paramount, Anaconda and Goodyear. United States Gypsum made a new high in light dealings.

The break in wheat, while started by lessened tension in Europe, was carried forward by stop loss sales. The close was down 1⅞ to 2¼ cents. Cotton was off 12 to 15 points, with futures now about 30 points under the average Government loan price.

Bond Market Narrow.

Listed bonds were even less active in the first session after Labor Day than before that holiday. The tradition of more active markets in September well may go the way of many others, if today's performance is any guide. Downward tendencies were the rule both in high grade and speculative bonds, with changes small in almost all instances. There were a few advances, but they were far from indicative. In the foreign section prices were mostly weak. Turnover was only $3,440,000.

United States Treasury issues drifted lower by 1-32 to 6-32 point, sheerly because of lack of interest by the larger institutional holders. The downward drift may prove disconcerting to the Treasury in reaching its decision on September financing, tomorrow. Best rated utility, railroad and industrial bonds were mostly unchanged, but where variations occurred they consisted of small fractional declines.

Speculative railroad bonds remained on offer, but the modest volume of business robbed the movement downward of great significance. Nickel Plate bonds fell 1 to 2 points at the investigation of recent divergencies in public statements proceeded. Borderline rails in general were off by fractions, and the intermediate-priced interest-payers showed similar results. Local tractions were soft, but communications issues improved. Other special groups were uncertain.

Czech bonds improved in the foreign section, despite the uncertainty that surrounds that country, and bond men continued to attribute the gain to sinking fund purchases. French and Belgian bonds were stable, and Scandinavians also were maintained. Japanese bonds improved a little, and Italians dipped fractionally. The default groups were dull and irregular.

World Trade Expansion Is Vital to Upturn

U. S. and British Goods Urgently Needed by Other Countries, Bank Says.

Montreal, Sept. 6.—The monthly letter of the Royal Bank of Canada notes today that with the sharp decline of American and British imports at the beginning of this year the exports of these two countries fell off in a much slighter degree, indicating great foreign need for American and British goods. Increase in imports by these two countries, says the letter, is a major factor in world recovery.

"From 1932 to 1937 there was a steady and rapid rise in the imports of both the United States and Great Britain," the bank says. "Within that period the imports of the United States more than doubled, and those of Great Britain increased by more than 50 per cent, as follows:

| | Imports. Great Britain Retained Imports. | United States Total Imports. |
|---|---|---|
| 1932 | $960,700,000 | $1,322,800,000 |
| 1933 | 636,700,000 | 1,449,500,000 |
| 1934 | 680,200,000 | 1,655,000,000 |
| 1935 | 700,700,000 | 2,047,500,000 |
| 1936 | 787,000,000 | 2,422,600,000 |
| 1937 | 953,900,000 | 3,083,700,000 |

"The drastic reversal of trend in the United States in 1937 and the subsequent sympathetic recession in British trade have been accompanied by an extraordinary decline in imports. Imports into the United States amounted to $961,000,000 in the first six months of 1938 as compared with $1,683,000,000 in the corresponding months of 1937, a decline of $722,000,000 in the amount made available to the rest of the world for purchases from within the United States. Imports into Great Britain did not fall off sharply until February; for the five months ending in June they amounted to £354,000,000 as compared with £434,000,000 in the previous five months, a decline of £80,000,000 or almost $400,000,000.

"It is an extraordinary comment upon the need for goods from the United States and Great Britain that during the interval when United States imports declined by $722,000,000, United States exports declined by only $84,000,000 and that while British imports were declining by £80,000,000, British exports declined by less than £3,000,000.

Reversal a Shock.

"As the steady rise in the imports of these two countries had played a major part in world recovery, so this sudden reversal constituted a severe shock to other parts of the world. It created a widespread fear that there was a renewed possibility of world-wide deflation.

"Current signs and indications that recovery is underway in both countries have been greeted as favorable omens for the future of world business. Is this recovery to be of sufficient magnitude to give a pronounced stimulus to world business? Will it be of sufficient

Cotton Falls Below 8 Cents

New York, Sept. 6 (AP).—Cotton eased below 8 cents in most delivery months today and to new lows for the current movement as hedge selling against the new crop continued. December sold off from 8.14 to 8.03 and closed at the low. Final prices were 12 to 15 points net lower.

The market opened 3 to 6 points lower in sympathy with earlier foreign markets over the local holiday and under Southern selling. The tone held steady as trade buying continued to absorb offerings at the basis of 8.10 for December but the steady flow of hedging orders finally filled this demand and prices slowly sagged. Other liquidation was influenced by disappointment over the failure of the market to hold at the loan basis and heaviness of other markets.

$25,590,000 War-Alarmed Gold Arrives

All From England With $10,450,000 More Soon Coming.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 6.—Uncle Sam's fabulous store of gold grew rapidly today as Europe, in its war fright, continued to transfer funds to this country for safe-keeping.

The Federal Reserve Bank of New York reported the arrival of $25,590,000 of the metal from England and arrangements for shipment of $10,450,000 more from the same source.

The Federal Reserve figures showed more than $100,000,000 had come from England since the war scare took hold late in July, not counting $36,000,000 engaged for shipment but not yet received.

The latest flight of capital from foreign currencies enhanced the standing of the U. S. Treasury as the world's greatest storehouse of precious metals. Treasury reports showed the gold store had risen to $13,162,000,000, more than half the recorded world monetary supply.

London Demand.

Demand for American dollars and gold in London continued brisk today. Money centers were nervous over the mobilization of military and naval power in Europe while the Nazi congress turned the financial spotlight more fiercely on continental developments.

The British pound, pivot of the movement of funds out of Europe, got better support after its sharp crack yesterday when Wall Street markets were closed for Labor Day. A drop about 2 cents in the pound, lowering the British exchange rate to $4.82¼, mainly reflected the break over Labor Day, bankers said.

Gold buyers in London had to pay about 19 cents an ounce more than on Saturday in terms of sterling, one of the widest jumps in the open-market gold price in recent years. The British monetary authorities since 1931 have run their controls partly through the fluctuating gold price, permitting the price of the metal to rise when the demand increased and to fall when the main flow of funds was toward London.

Failures Decline.

New York, Sept. 6 (AP).—Business failures in the United States for the week ended September 1 declined to 226 from 230 in the preceding period, Dun & Bradstreet reported today. A year ago they totaled 151.

Bob Burns Says—

I read the other day where the work on these Government jobs is not carried on as efficiently as private enterprises. I believe the men'd work jest as hard and diligently on a Government job as any other if they had the right kind of a foreman.

My uncle was foreman of one of them Government jobs once and when the superintendent complained that he had heard about some of the men coming in after the whistle was blown, my uncle says, "Oh, I'll fix that all right."

Two weeks later, when the superintendent sent for my uncle and asked him if he had managed to get all the men on the job before the whistles blew, my uncle says, "Yes, I fixed that up fine." He says, "The last man in blows the whistle now!"

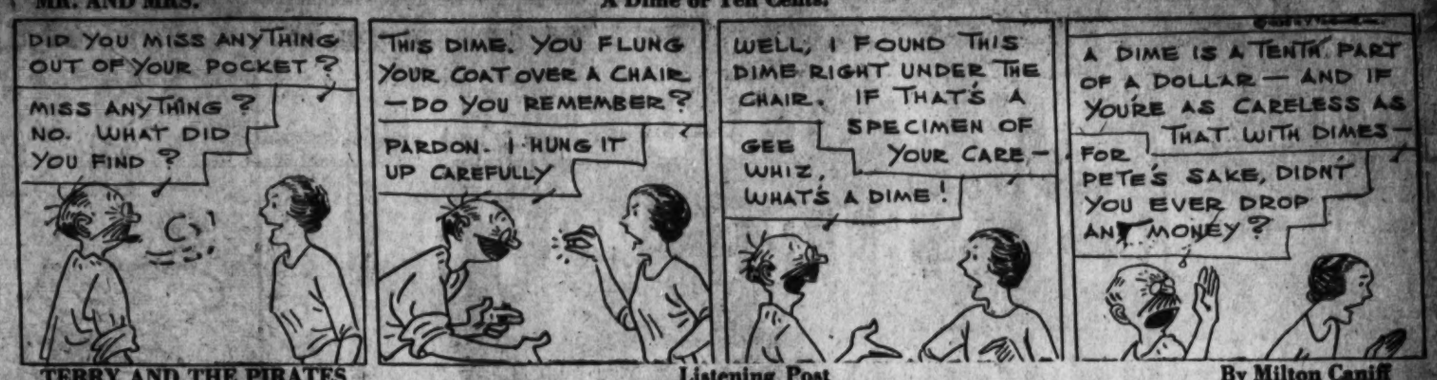
MR. AND MRS. — A Dime or Ten Cents.



DID YOU MISS ANYTHING OUT OF YOUR POCKET?
MISS ANYTHING? NO. WHAT DID YOU FIND?
THIS DIME. YOU FLUNG YOUR COAT OVER A CHAIR —DO YOU REMEMBER?
PARDON. I HUNG IT UP CAREFULLY
WELL, I FOUND THIS DIME RIGHT UNDER THE CHAIR. IF THAT'S A SPECIMEN OF YOUR CARE— GEE WHIZ, WHAT'S A DIME!
A DIME IS A TENTH PART OF A DOLLAR— AND IF YOU'RE AS CARELESS AS THAT WITH DIMES— FOR PETE'S SAKE, DIDN'T YOU EVER DROP ANY MONEY?

TERRY AND THE PIRATES

BUT WHY DID YOU LET 'EM PUT US IN THE CAPTAIN'S CABIN, PAT?
TWO REASONS, TERRY! I'VE SUSPECTED SINCE AUNTIE WAS SO SURPRISED TO SEE US ON BOARD THAT SHE WAS UP TO SOMETHING!
THE CAPTAIN TOLD ME IT WAS SHE WHO SELECTED OUR COURSE FOR THIS TRIP— I THINK SHE HAD SOME IDEA OF DOING BURMA HARM....
...THEN, WHEN THESE PIRATES BOARDED US SHE DIDN'T SEEM FRIGHTENED UNTIL THE FAT LITTLE LEADER SAID HE HAD TO CHANGE PLANS AND HOLD US ALL FOR RANSOM...
THIS CABIN IS NEXT TO DRUSILLA CRAIL'S!— I'M PLAYING THE HUNCH THAT IF SHE WAS IN CAHOOTS WITH SHORTY— HE'LL BE DOWN, AND THEY'LL TALK LOUDLY ENOUGH FOR US TO HEAR THROUGH THIS VENTILATOR!

Don't miss "Good Scouts" with Donald Duck and his nephews, now playing at R. K. O. Keith's Theater.

BUT WHY YOU WANTA BORROW WAHOO'S MOCCASINS, MRS. VAN SLEAK?
OH, I WANTED IT TO BE A SURPRISE, BUT I'LL HAVE TO TELL YOU I GUESS!
YOU SEE, I NOTICED YOUR MOCCASINS WEREN'T DECORATED LIKE THOSE I'VE SEEN IN THE WEST. I HAPPEN TO HAVE SOME VERY PRETTY BEADS IN MY CABIN, AND I'M GOING TO SEW THEM ON THESE —AS A LABOR OF LOVE.
WAIT FOR ME HERE. I'LL BE BACK IN A JIFFY!
QUICK, ERIC! GET ME A NEEDLE AND THREAD, AND UNSTRING THE KALIMAR DIAMONDS! THAT MILLION DOLLAR NECKLACE IS GOING TO WALK PAST THE U.S. CUSTOM INSPECTORS!
WALK?

WINNIE WINKLE — Cheerful Little Earful — By Branner

I HOPE WINNIE DOESN'T COME IN AND ASK THE BOSS FOR A RAISE AS SHE THREATENED!
HI YA, WILL, MY BOY!
SAY, THAT'S THE FIRST TIME THE BOSS HAS GIVEN ME A CHEERY GREETING SINCE I'VE BEEN HERE!
HMMM —THAT'S A VERY BAD SIGN!
HE'S ALWAYS LIKE THAT WHEN HE WANTS TO GET RID OF YOU! REMEMBER HOW NICE HE WAS TO JONESY BEFORE HE LET HIM GO!

MEN! NOW YOU CAN WEAR A SHIRT WITH A COLLAR ADJUSTABLE TO 3 different sizes!

★ The new three-way exact fit collar is adjustable to QUARTER sizes!

That means that a size 14½ collar can be adjusted to 14¼ or 14¾! Many men have trouble with collars shrinking after laundering. Some men even have an odd-size neck—one that can't be fitted in a standard size collar. But no man will have to suffer these annoyances who wears a Line-Fold Shirt. Great stuff? You bet! See them tomorrow!

THE NEW "X-ACT" FIT Line-Fold Shirts

With a new collar that lasts as long as the body!

EXCLUSIVE WITH THE HECHT CO. IN WASHINGTON

1.95

Believe us, men, this shirt is the most exciting thing we've had in a long, long time! A shirt that has everything! Every quality that you'll find in the finest of $1.95 shirts in the country. PLUS sensational new features that are rapidly making it the most talked-of shirt in America! Just look at these:

1. Neckband adjustable to quarter sizes!
2. The one-piece collar that prevents uncomfortable binding at the neck!
3. A collar that will wear as long as the body of the shirt!
4. The one-piece collar prevents bulging and fraying!
5. The "Line-Fold" collar will not wilt or curl!
6. Full cut bodies . . . tailored carefully throughout. Sizes 13½ to 17.

● White Broadcloth ● Solid Color Broadcloth ● New Fall Patterns

"X-ACT-FIT"

Will enable you to fit quarter sizes in collar-attached shirts for the first time. An exclusive patented feature.

One-Piece Collar

The Line-Fold Shirt has a one-piece collar that will last as long as the body of the shirt itself.

Line-Fold Collars

The fold line of the collar is built in and the collar folds automatically without pressure. It irons with ease.

4-Ply Thickness

Instead of the usual nine-ply collars found in other shirts. No thickness to become soggy or bulgy.
